

will be safer in their hands than in ours. We believe this to be the only remedy, and at the same time, we must confess, that to our mind, the remedy is worse than the disease. We shudder in contemplation of the evils that would flow from such a state of society. The blackness that shrouds the future, we do not pretend to penetrate. No human power can shield us from the evils that await us in a struggle between the North and South, and the consequences which will flow from it. Our confidence is, that the Almighty arm which gave us freedom, will protect those who come after us and continue to them the privileges and enjoyments which we are unworthy to possess, in some manner which we cannot comprehend.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, October 4th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

NATIONAL MONUMENT. The Pilgrim Society of Plymouth propose to obtain a general contribution of twenty-five cents each from the American people, for the erection of a monument to the Forefathers at Plymouth. A neat engraving of the monument will be furnished to each subscriber.

NORFOLK COUNTY. The Republican Convention for Norfolk will be held at Fremont Club Room, Bacon's Building, Roxbury, on the 8th of October.

CONGRESSIONAL NOMINATIONS. Hon. Anson Burlingame of Cambridge, has been re-nominated for Congress by the Republicans and the Fremont Americans. In both conventions the nomination was made by acclamation.

The Republicans and Fremont Americans have held conventions, in the Fourth District, and in both Hon. Lins B. Comins of Roxbury, was nominated for Congress.

A FARMER FOR OFFICE. Arthur W. Austin, Esq., of West Roxbury, the democratic nominee for Congress from this district (No. 3) obtained four different premiums for four colts exhibited by him at the Norfolk Agricultural Fair at Dedham, the present week. Mr. A. may be always found on the side of progress, and therefore deserving of the confidence of the community.

MAGNIFICENT CARPET WAREHOUSE. We would solicit the attention of the public to the largest and best supplied Carpet Warehouse in all New England—the warehouse of Massachusetts—John H. Pray, Sons & Co., Nos. 253 and 255, Washington Street Boston.

On the 17th ult., a day ever to be remembered as Boston's greatest festival—the Franklin festival—we visited this magnificent establishment, and from what we saw of their stock and their system of trade, we think the public do not require to be told that twice one is two, or that the motto of Messrs. Pray, Sons & Co., is fair, manly and lowest dealing, at quick sales and small profit. Of their immense stock—in all its variety—pronounced by all who have seen it, unequalled for durability and beauty, it would be superfluous for us to speak in commendation, but cheerfully submit to the judgement of connoisseurs in the matters, and the judgement of an enlightened public.

Call at Pray, Sons & Co., and you are sure to get the right article for economy and usefulness.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN DENTAL SURGERY.—Teth extracted without pain! We take the pleasure in calling public attention to new process of extracting teeth, which has been practiced with the greatest success. It has for years, been great desideratum of the profession to alleviate the pain and suffering of its necessary and important operations. Many patients suffer far more from dread of pain than from actual experience; and any reliable method, freeing from pain, should be regarded a public benefit.

The process, which is the result of long study, is known as Congealation, and consists of the local application of a benumbing agent to the parts to be operated upon. It arrests the circulation, and just in proportion as this is amply efficient for all cases, it is open to none of the objections urged against other methods. We have seen letters from a large number of persons who had from one to eighteen teeth extracted by this new process, and all speak of it in the highest terms of commendation.

All interested in this important discovery in the dental art, we would recommend to call at the office of Drs. Cummings & Flagg, 25 Tremont street, who will take great pleasure in explaining the operation. These enterprising gentlemen are noted for the speedy adoption of every useful improvement calculated to lessen the pain and increase the comfort of their numerous patients, and we are glad to know are meeting with that success they so richly merit.—Boston Journal.

The number of whistler societies now in this country is eighteen, located in seven different states. There are none in any foreign country.

For the Patriot.

The proper Age for going to School.

The proper period of life at which a child should begin to attend school is a subject of interest to every parent. My own impression, formed from observation and experience, is, that children are sent into our schools at too early an age, both as concerns their own good and that of the schools. Convinced as I am that there is no gain but usually a positive loss from sending children into schools thus young, I beg leave most respectfully to call your attention to the whole subject. As guardians of the Public Schools, it seems highly proper that you should speak and act on all subjects pertaining to the true interest of the Schools. The proper development of the physical powers of a child require that he should have much exercise in the open air, and to confine him to the rigid discipline of the school room with its routine of duties, seems to be entirely at variance with his very nature. What mother would ever think of requiring a child to sit in one position without change and without speaking for a single hour? It seems to war against the very nature of a child to demand him to keep his body and tongue still during any five consecutive minutes of his waking hours; and yet how many mothers there are, who, without hesitation, send their little ones to the school where they must necessarily spend most of three consecutive hours in each half of the day—keeping both body and tongue in all due subjection to the laws of the school room. If such mothers would enter our schools, and witness the languid, weary, listless appearance of the children, their very hearts would ache for them, and never would they consent to have their children thus confined. But it will be said, that children love to go to school, and that they apparently enjoy themselves. It is true that they are fond of meeting their mates, and enjoy the occasional seasons allowed them for amusements. But if all their feelings could be known, together with the wearisome hours and aches from close confinement, it would be found that they were paying a most extravagant price "for the whistle." But aside from this, do the children gain intellectually by being put to books while they are under the age of six? It is unquestionably true that they do not. In many cases children who are sent to school quite young, lose all their interest in school matters before they are really able to appreciate their value, or comprehend the meaning of their lessons. It is not true that many children who are considered quite forward scholars at the age of six, become dull and uninterested at the age of twelve years? Fully believing that all time under the age of six years spent in the schools, is a positive injury to all concerned, I would suggest the propriety of making some change in reference to the age at which pupils should be admitted to, or of so modifying the character of our Primary Schools that children should be confined but a short time at once.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

It is to be feared that our Primary Schools have not yet assumed their true position in the public mind. These schools are, in more than one sense, Primary Schools. In many respects they should be considered as of the very first importance. Children here receive their earliest and most lasting school impressions—impressions which will "grow with their growth, and strengthen with their strength." How desirable is it that these impressions be of the right kind, and be made in the best manner. As "A pebble in the streamlet scant

Has turned the course of many a river,
A dew-drop on the infant plant
Has warped the giant oak forever."

So has the mind of many a child been turned from a true course by the ill-judged and unwise plans, or by the chilling effects of neglect on the part of those under whose care they were placed. The young and tender minds of these little ones in these schools are as pliable in the hands of an affectionate and faithful teacher, as "clay in the hands of the potter." We may almost say that it is in his or her power to mould and fashion them as he or she pleases. If so, of what immense importance is it that a wise care be exercised in the selection of those to whom the training of these young and susceptible minds be intrusted. How important that the teachers of these schools should be, in every word and deed, in personal appearance and in all their habits and movements, models of all that may seem desirable. The kind, gentle, affectionate, and faithful teacher may gain an almost unlimited influence and control over children at this tender age. It is emphatically true that good or bad habits formed in these schools, will effect favorably or unfavorably, the whole subsequent school-life of pupils. And yet, with what indifference, with what closeness in bargainings, are these teachers frequently selected. Called to perform the most responsible and laborious duties, their actual compensation is often less than that received by those engaged in any other calling. In other matters, people act more wisely. If a farmer has a colt to be trained, he does not manifest indifference as to whose care the work shall be intrusted, nor does he value dollars and cents in comparison with right training; and will parents be less wise and less interested in relation to the training of the immortal souls of their offspring? Will they not awake to see this subject in its true light, and view it in all its length and breadth, its height and depth? It is sometimes supposed that almost any one will answer to teach a school of small children, but this is a most stupendous error. Another has truly said, "It is no child's play to teach a school of small children. The mistaken and ruinous notion is sometimes entertained, that while the highest order of talent is required for the instructor of advanced schools, any body will do for beginners. Wordsworth, throughout his large octavo volume, has expressed no truer thought than that contained in the simple line so often quoted:

"The child is father of the man."

The teacher of the Primary Schools, sweetens or embitters the water of the fountain. An infusion which might poison the heart and life of the child might be poured into the man without special harm. There is no grace however winning, no virtue however ennobling, no knowledge however profound, no wisdom however exalted, which may not find full scope for its exercise even in an Infant School. A teacher of small children, especially, should be a sort of locomotive patent office; full of all manner of inventions. The young love novelty as much as they hate routine. To secure their interest, therefore, one must excite their astonishment and admiration every hour of every day in the week with some "new thing under the sun."

Great efforts should be made to promote the accurate training of pupils in these schools, and also to make them as happy as possible.

KANSAS. A letter to the St. Louis Republican, dated Oct. 3, gives the following: "The armed bands that have been ranging through the territory are dispersed, and citizens are returning to their claims. Business is reviving, confidence is restored, and peace reigns throughout the Territory."

Brooks, the representative of Southern character by the endorsement of the South itself, says, "If Fremont should be successful in November next, it is his deliberate opinion, that on the Fourth of March next the people of the South should RISE IN THEIR MIGHT, march to Washington, and SEIZE the archives and the Treasury of the Government."

Millard Fillmore says, "The SOUTH will not SUBMIT FOR A MOMENT to the election of Fremont."

Poetry.

The Flesh Resting in Hope.

The grave is mine house: I have made my bed in the darkness: * * * * the clod of the valley shall be sweet unto him.—JOB, XXII. 13; XXI. 33

Lie down, frail body! here,
Earth has no fairer bed,
No gentler pillow to afford—
Come, rest thy home-sick head!

Lie down, 'vile body' here,
This mould is smoothly strewn;
No couch of flowers more softly spread—
Come, rest this grave thine own!

Lie down with all thy aches,
There is no aching here;
How soon shall all thy life-long ills
For ever disappear!

Through these well-guarded gates
No foe can entrance gain;
No sickness wastes, nor once intrudes
The memory of pain.

The tossings of the night,
The frettings of the day,
All end; and, like a cloud of dawn,
Melt from the skies away.

Fontaine and worn-out art,
Breathless with toil and fight,
How welcome now the long-sought sleep
Of this all tranquil night!

Brief night and quiet couch
In some star-lightened room,
Watch 'd but by one beloved eye,
Whose light dispels all gloom.

A sky without a cloud,
A sea without a wave—
These are but shadows of thy rest
In this thy peaceful grave.

Rest for the tiring hand,
Rest for the thought worn brow,
Rest for the weary way-sore foot,
Rest from all labor now;

Rest from the fever'd brain,
Rest for the throbbing eye;
Through these porch'd lips of thine no more
Shall pass the moan or sigh.

Soon shall the tramp of Gai!
Give out the welcome sound,
That shakes thy chamber-walls,
And breaks the turf-seal'd ground.

Ye dwellers in the dust,
Awake! come forth and sing;
Sharp was your frost of winter been,
But bright shall be your spring.

'Twas sown in weakness here,
'Twill then be raised in power;
That which was sown an earthly seed,
Shall rise a heavenly flower.

Castles in the Air.

Farewell, my castle, raised so high!
Farewell, ye towers of beauty!
From your enchantment I must fly
To sober paths of duty.

Al! many an hour could I employ,
These lovely towers adorning,
Till every airy belfry
Should seem a star of morning!

But, go, vain dreams, depart!
Though fondly loved, I feel it,
That while you soothe the heart,
From better things you steal it.

When rose the storm of grief and care
On life's uncertain billow,
I sought my castles in the air,
And found a ready pillow.

Here joys to come were always shown;
The present grief dispelling;
For future woe is all unknown
In my aerial dwelling.

The lesson thus was lost,
For which the storm was given—
To show the tempest taught
A refuge sure in heaven!

Here Hope, though cheated o'er and o'er,
I thought, would dwell secure;
And deemed, of all her various stores,
This gift the best and surest.

While Fancy strove, with magic glass,
To raise the scene ideal,
Still whispered Hope, "Through this may
The rest will surely be real."

Thus many a darling theme,
Was forming and undoing,
But still a brighter dream
Arose upon the rain.

Thus, in the fields of wild romance,
I tarried for a season;
But still, at every change and chance,
I heard the voice of reason:

"O! at some holier, happier shrine,
Devote thy thoughts to ranging,
Whose base is truth and love divine,
His fabric never changing."

Thy hopes through youth and age,
If thou wilt better guide them,
Though tempests rise and rage,
Securely shall abide them."

Anecdotes.

Miss, will you take my arm?
Yes, sir, and you too.
Can't spare but one arm, replied the old bachelor.

Then, replied she, I shan't take it, as my motto is, GO THE WHOLE HOG OR NOTHING.

Got a Bible in your house, my son?
Yes, sir. Father uses it every day.
Possible!
Yes sir—every time he loads his gun!

CELEBRATED LINIMENT.

Equally Good for MAN or BEAST!
HAS triumphed where all other external applications have failed to have any beneficial effect. It is justly acknowledged to be the greatest EXTERNAL REMEDY in the world, and its sale is unsurpassed in the annals of medicine. Unlike most other popular medicines of the day, it is used and recommended by many eminent members of the Medical Faculty, their prejudices having yielded to the many indisputable demonstrations of cures it has performed where all other remedies have failed.

Hundreds of certificates might be given showing almost unbroken cures in cases of Rheumatism—Neuralgia—Spinal Complaints, &c., and in Bruises, Burns, Flesh Wounds of all kinds, old Sores, Sprains, Broken Bones, dislocations, &c., &c.—but a FAIR TRIAL is all that is required to convince the most skeptical of its merits. See Circulars.

AYER'S

CATHARTIC PILLS

OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and, by restoring their regular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease.
An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors,
Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases almost beyond belief, more than substantiated by persons of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth.
Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the complaints which they have been found to cure.

For COSTIVENESS.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently move the bowels. Costiveness is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

For DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild doses—from one to four—stimulate the stomach and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the heartburn, body pains, and sourness of dyspepsia
forget what cured you.

For A FETID STOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take from four to eight Pills at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity
and strength is restored to the system.

For NERVOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA,
Pain in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they do. These complaints will be swept out from the system. Don't wear these and their kindred disorders over your stomach is foul.

For SCURF, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, to keep the bowels open. The eruptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many dreadful ulcers and sores have been healed up by the purging and purifying effect of these Pills, and some disgusting diseases which seemed to saturate the whole system have completely yielded to their influence, leaving the sufferer in perfect health.
Patients! your duty to society forbids that you should parade yourself around the world covered with pimples, blotches, ulcers, sores, and all or any of the numerous diseases of the skin, because "the system wants cleansing."

To PURIFY THE BLOOD, they are the best medicine ever discovered. They should be taken freely and frequently, and the impurities which they remove, and the diseases which they cure, are the seeds of incurable diseases will be swept out from the system like chaff before the wind. By this property they do as much good in preventing sickness as by the remarkable cures which they are making every where.

LIVER COMPLAINT, JAUNDICE, and all Bilious Affections arise from some derangement—either torpidity, congestion, or obstructions of the Liver.
Torpidity and congestion vitiate the bile and render it unfit for digestion. This is disastrous to the health, and the constitution is frequently undermined by no other cause. Indigestion is the symptom. Obstruction of the duct which empties the bile into the stomach causes the bile to overflow into the blood. This produces jaundice, with a jaundiced and dangerous train of evils. Costiveness simultaneously constipates and diarrhoea, prevails.
Feverish symptoms, languor, low spirits, weariness, redness, and tenderness with tenderness, and inability to sleep, and sometimes great drowsiness, sometimes there is severe pain in the side; the skin and the white of the eyes become a greenish yellow;
the stomach aches; the bowels sore to the touch;
the whole system irritable, with a tendency to fever, which may turn to bilious fever, bilious colic, bilious diarrhoea, dysentery, &c., &c. A moderate dose of four or five Pills taken at night, followed by two or three in the morning, and repeated a few days, will remove the cause of all these troubles. It is warranted to suffice such pains when you can cure them for a cent.

RHEUMATISM, GOUT, and all Inflammatory Fevers are rapidly cured by the purifying effects of these Pills upon the blood, and the humors which they afford to the vital principle of Life. For these and all kindred complaints they should be taken in mild doses, to move the bowels gently, but freely.

As a DINNER PILLS this is both agreeable and useful. No Pill can be made more pleasant to take, and certainly none has been made more effectual to the purpose for which a dinner pill is employed.

Who's to Blame?

One evening, the fastidious Harry Wentworth, on coming home tired and depressed, found his wife in the parlor, dressed in a soiled morning gown, and wearing a pair of slippers down at the heel. To increase his vexation she was sitting in an easy chair, with one leg crossed over the other, reading a trashy novel.

Why, Fanny! he exclaimed in amazement, for they had been married only a few months, and hitherto he had thought her the pink of neatness.

Well, what is it? she asked, looking up. Then, noticing the direction of his eyes, she assumed a more becoming position. You don't like my dress perhaps, she continued. But really I was too tired to change it.

What have you been doing all day? said Harry.

Oh, reading this, she replied; she colored as she held up the book, and added, and then it has been so warm!

Now her husband had been hard at work all through the sultry summer day, and had, as was usual with him when busy, dined at his office. Yet his attire was neat, and even his hair newly brushed; for he had gone to his chamber to do this before coming into the parlor. It may be supposed, therefore, that he was annoyed at the slovenliness of his wife, the more so, as, on looking at the novel he found it quite a worthless affair. He said nothing, however, except—at least change your slippers my dear. You don't know how I dislike to see a lady slipshod.

Do you! how odd! said his wife with a silly laugh, stooping to pull up the heels of her shoes. There, that will do I think. I really can't walk so far as the chamber this warm evening. I wish you would ring for tea, the bell is just by you, as I want to finish this chapter.

Her husband sighed, but did as he was bid. The tea came up, and he took his seat, but the chapter was not yet concluded, and so he was compelled to wait. When, at last, Mrs. Wentworth went to the table, the tea was cold. The meal, under those circumstances, was a dull one, and the husband, after tea was over, finding his wife absorbed in her book, laid down on the sofa and finally went to sleep.

Mrs. Wentworth had been the belle of the town before her marriage. Her sprightliness and beauty had been the theme of constant admiration. But these qualities would have failed to win Harry Wentworth's heart, if they had not been sustained by a most exquisite taste in dress. See Fanny when you would, she was always carefully attired; and as Harry Wentworth was particularly fastidious on this point, he thought himself the happiest of men when Fanny, one bright summer evening promised to be his.

But unfortunately the bride had no real habits of neatness, but only a love of admiration. It was vanity that had induced her while single to be careful of her dress; but now that she was married, she gradually gave way to her natural indolence. The first occasion on which she did this to any very glaring extent, was the evening on which our story opens; but it was soon followed up by other exhibitions of slovenliness.

I do wish, Fanny, that you would dress more neatly, said Mr. Wentworth in a vexed voice, some months later still. Night after night, I come home and find you in that atrocious wrapper.

You used to think me pretty enough in any dress, retorted Mrs. Wentworth, testily. But I never saw you in one like that before we were married, replied the husband.

To be sure not, said Mrs. Wentworth, and she laughed ironically. I always dressed for the company then, and I do so now.

What could Mr. Wentworth say? If his wife did not think it necessary to be neat in his presence—did not consider him as worthy of pleasing as the comparative strangers whom she called company—it was useless to argue with her; so, after tea, the slipshod heels still annoying him, with a perceptible hole in the stocking to increase that annoyance, he moodily took his hat and left the house.

At first, Mr. Wentworth walked up and down the street, but at last, fatigued with this, he stepped into a debating room attached to a tavern. Here he met several acquaintances, and gradually falling into conversation, the evening passed rapidly away.

When he went home, Mrs. Wentworth, looking very sleepy, and a little out of humor, accosted him with—

Where in the world have you been? I finished my novel an hour ago, and have had nobody to talk to ever since. I am moped to death. There was a time, she added, pointing, when nothing in the world could have induced you to spend an evening away from me.

Her husband was on the point of replying in a similar upbraiding style, but he recollected that he had expostulated too often and too vainly, and so said nothing.

It was a week before Mr. Wentworth spent another evening out. He tried sincerely to stay at home; but his annoyance at his wife's slovenliness was too great, and at last he left her again to her novel and her slipshod shoes.

Mr. Wentworth has now become a confirmed visitor of the debating room, the members of which are chiefly married men; and if the truth were known, it would appear, we believe, that most of them, if not all, have wives resembling Mrs. Wentworth. Sometimes there is an undue quantity of brandy and water drunk, at these meetings, so that some members, and Mr. Wentworth among them, cetera desunt.

Physical Pain of Death.

A paragraph is going the rounds of the papers giving the opinion of Lord Bacon and others, that the pain of hanging is inconceivable. It is asserted, for example, that at a momentary feeling of suffocation, bright colors dance before the eyes, and stretch away into vistas of indescribable loveliness. There is no reason to doubt the truth of this declaration, because numerous instances have occurred of persons being cut down before life was extinct; and it was on the authority of well authenticated examples of this character Lord Bacon and others founded their opinion. Moreover, hanging in its effect on the human organism, produces results very similar to those produced by some natural diseases, so that this also affords a criterion for judging. In cases of drowning, likewise, the testimony is universal that the physical pain up to the moment of consciousness being lost is quite inconsiderable. The same phenomena of mutes, stars and beautiful lights dancing before the eyes, has often been mentioned by individuals restored after apparent death by drowning.

It is nearly certain—indeed, as certain as anything chiefly speculative can be—that in all deaths the physical suffering is small. Even where invalids experience the most excruciating agony during the progress of the disease, nature comes to their relief at the last hour, and life goes out gently, like a candle in its socket. Those who have witnessed death-beds most frequently, especially if they have been intelligent persons, and therefore capable of judging, agree generally in considering the physical pain of death is inconsiderable. They say that the convulsive motions, which frequently attend the parting breath, are not evidences of suffering, for that the invalid is insensible. They say, also, that when the senses are retained, there is usually no such spasm.

A leading medical authority states that scarcely one person in fifty is sensible at the point of death; and some physicians assert that they had never seen a death-bed in which the patient was sensible. As life falls, nature, it would seem, beneficently interposes, deadening the sensibility of the nerves, and otherwise preparing the individual for the great and inevitable change.

These facts should teach all men, while yet in health, "to put their house in order." Many a father, by neglecting to make a will, or keep his business always arranged, has left his family an inheritance of litigation, or entailed on them the severest losses. Few are those, comparatively, who, on a sick bed, have sufficient clearness of intellect left to adjust entangled affairs, provide for contingencies of trade, or even direct wisely the distribution of their estate.

Death usually comes rapidly, in the shape of a short disease, leaving time for nothing but a wild and hopeless struggle with the enemy. Or it comes so insidiously as to beguile the victim and its friends, up to the last hour, with the hope of recovery, or at least of months prolonged life. Men dread sudden death, and pray to be delivered from it, forgetting that, to most of us, death is always sudden, coming as Scripture truly says, "like a thief in the night." It is not for its physical pain that men should fear death, but lest it should overtake them ere they have "set their house in order." To be leaving a family unprotected, or to have put off arrangements for settling up one's affairs, is the real pang of the dying hour.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rattlesnakes and their Venom.

The editor of the Philadelphia Journal shows a remarkable familiarity with rattlesnakes, and his authority on this subject will not hereafter be questioned. He refers to the recent horrible death of a woman in Bath, (N. Y.) from the bite of this venomous creature, and expresses the opinion that this result might have been averted by the use of preventives which are almost always within reach. The Journal says:

We have seen a good deal of this reptile, and have repeatedly known persons who have been badly bitten to recover without the aid of any medical men. Perhaps the most remarkable case of recovery from the bite of this snake is that of Mr. Dean, the surveyor of the large Bingham estate, in Northern Pennsylvania. While far in the dense pine woods, more than half a day's walk from any habitation, he was bitten upon the fleshy part of the leg, close to a vein, and in a moment afterwards was seized with the most agonizing pains. Being an inveterate smoker, the idea of applying tobacco to the wound suggested itself; but on searching his pouch he found that not a fragment remained. He had, however, an old blackened clay pipe that he had used for many months, and dragging himself to a flat rock he reduced the pipe to powder, which he wetted and bandaged upon the wound. An hour afterwards he removed it, and found that a single globule of greenish fluid had exuded from the puncture made by the fangs of the snake. A second application of the same expellable completed the cure; and although he suffered from excruciating pains for some hours afterwards, he reached home the same night. We believe it was not doubted that the poison in this instance had been taken up into the circulation.

The case of Dr. Wainwright, of New York, himself a physician of distinction, who perished from a bite upon his finger, we always believed might have been cured had the use of internal remedies been discarded, and a local application made to the wound. Dr. Wainwright had just received the snake in question by express, packed in a plain box; and in transferring it to a suitable cage was bitten in the hand. And although the most eminent physicians in the city were in prompt attendance, he expired in a few hours afterwards. The whole pharmacopoeia appeared at fault, for almost every official remedy was ineffectually tried. Yet we could almost assert that had he been bitten in a country settlement in North Pennsylvania, with no physician within fifty miles, his life would have been saved by the unpretending medicaments which the simple old ladies keep ready prepared for such contingencies.

These serpents are most dangerous in August, when they become blind, for they strike at hazard, and far more frequently than under ordinary circumstances. Happily, the snake is sluggish in its motions, and is easily killed with a small switch. Did it possess the activity and pluck of the common black snake, the countries which it infests would be absolutely uninhabitable. Occasionally, however, we have killed them only after an obstinate battle, and when it finds that escape is impossible, the snake, in its sluggish fury, will sometimes bite itself, and then it becomes poisonous to the touch. In other cases, when decapitated, its body cannot only be handled with impunity, but the country people attribute a marvellous degree of efficacy to the oil which they prepare from its fat.

We have often been amused at hearing the goodness of Providence illustrated by the remark "that even the poisonous rattlesnake is furnished with a rattle so that it may give warning before it makes the dreaded strike!" This is simply absurd. When the snake inflicts a blow, its tail is motionless. The reptile lies in a coil with its head gleaming from the middle, and in springing to an attack, straightens itself out; but it cannot leap from the ground as many other snakes do. When it "sings," as country people characterize the vibration of its rattles, which sounds not unlike the noise made by the harvest locust—it is expressive of a wish for peace, and if no farther molested, there is no danger to be apprehended. But if trodden upon or suddenly encountered, the rattle is never heard; the snake will then strike in the manner we have described, but can take effect only providing the object of the blow, be not further distant than the reptile's length.

Where they are very abundant in the country, people usually wear woolen stockings, in which if they bite their fangs become caught, and a slight blow instantly kills them.

Sea Waves and Sea Sickness.

The old vague account of waves being "mountains high" was well known to be an exaggeration; but we do not think even philosophers were prepared for the statement made at a meeting some years since of the British Scientific Association by Dr. Scoresby, that they average no more than twenty feet in altitude, and rarely exceed twenty-eight feet. The popular impression, principally produced by marine painters, that waves formed valleys thousands of yards across, down the sides of which ships slid as though they were about to be engulfed, seems to be equally erroneous, as the maximum length of ocean waves, according to the same authority, is six hundred feet, whilst in a moderate gale they are only three hundred, and, in a fresh sea, about one hundred and twenty feet in length.

A moment's consideration of these facts leads to the conclusion that long ships must have a great advantage over short ones with respect to the rapidity with which they make their journey, as it is quite evident that the latter have to perform their voyages by making a series of short curves—much to the impediment of their progress, and to the discomfort of their inmates—the former, by ruling the waves with their commanding proportions, make shorter and smoother passages. As steamers grow larger and larger, sea-sickness gradually diminishes.—Scientific American.

Keep Watch on the Tongue.

People are often subjected to extreme mortification by indulging disparaging remarks of strangers, and learning subsequently that the persons themselves, or some of their intimate friends, were within hearing of the remarks. Such unpleasant occurrences rarely have so pleasant a termination as the following rencontre between Dr. Dwight and Mr. Dennie:—

As Dr. Dwight was travelling through New Jersey, he chanced to stop at a stage hotel in one of its populous towns for the night. At a late hour of the same night, arrived also at the inn, Mr. Dennie, who had the misfortune to learn that the beds were all paired with lodgers except one, occupied by the celebrated Dr. Dwight.

Show me to his apartment, exclaimed Dennie; although I am a stranger to the Doctor, perhaps I can bargain with him for my lodgings. The landlord accordingly waited on Mr. Dennie to the Doctor's room, and there left him to introduce himself. The Doctor, although in his night gown, cap and slippers, and just ready to resign himself to the arms of Somnus, requested the strange intruder to be seated. The Doctor was struck with the literary physiognomy of his companion, unbent his austere brow and commenced a literary conversation. The name of Washington, Franklin, Rittenhouse, a host of literary and distinguished characters, for some time gave zest and interest to the conversation, until Dwight chanced to mention the name of Dennie.

Dennie, the editor of the Portfolio, says the Doctor in a rhapsody, is the Addison of the United States—the father of American Belle Lettres. But sir, continued he, is it not astonishing that a man of such genius, fancy and feeling, should abandon himself to the drinking bowl and bacchanalian revels?

Sir, said Dennie, you are mistaken; I have been intimately acquainted with Dennie for several years, and I never knew or saw him intoxicated.

Sir, says the Doctor, you err; I have my information from a particular friend; I am confident that I am right, and that you are wrong.

Dennie now ingeniously changed the conversation to the clergy, remarking that Doctor Abercrombie and Mason were among our most distinguished divines; nevertheless, he considered Dr. Dwight, President of Yale College, the most learned theologian—the first logician—and the greatest poet that America has ever produced. But, sir, continued Dennie, there are traits in his character undeserving so great and wise a man, of the most detestable description—he is the greatest bigot and dogmatist of the age!

Sir, said the Doctor, you are grossly mistaken. I am intimately acquainted with Dr. Dwight, and know to the contrary.

Sir, says Dennie, you are mistaken. I have it from an intimate acquaintance of his,

who I am confident would not tell me an untruth.

No more of slander, says the Doctor, I am Dr. Dwight of whom you speak!

And I, too, exclaimed Dennie, am Mr. Dennie, of whom you spoke!

The astonishment of Dr. Dwight may better be conceived than told. Suffice it to say, they mutually shook hands, and were extremely happy in each other's acquaintance.

The Fly and the Spider.

The children once went with their grand-mother to see a spider's web; they thought it very curious, and talked a good deal about it, though they could not see the use of such things, nor why there should be such creatures as spiders at all. Their grandmother replied, My dear children, I cannot tell you just now all the reasons why the all-wise God created and sustains the various creatures which we see around us, though we may be sure there is some good end to be served; but I will tell you a pretty story, which may at least help us to think upon the subject.

A young prince used often to wonder what purpose God had made flies and spiders; as he could not see, he said, what use they were to men, and, if he had the power, he would kill them all. One day, after a great battle, this prince was obliged to hide himself from his enemies; and wandering about in a wood, he laid down beneath a tree, and fell asleep. A soldier passing by, who belonged to the enemy, was quietly drawing near with his sword to kill the prince, when all of a sudden a fly stung his lip and awoke him. Seeing his danger, he sprang to his feet, and made the soldier run off. That night the prince again hid himself in a cave in the same wood, and during the night a spider wove her web across the entrance. Two soldiers belonging to the army which had defeated him, and who were looking for the prince, passed the cave in the morning, and the prince heard their conversation.

Look, cried one of them, he is surely concealed in this cave.

No, replied the other, that is impossible; for if he had got in there he would have brushed down the spider's web at the entrance.

When they had gone away the prince raised his hands and eyes to heaven, and thanked God for the goodness in yesterday saving his life by means of a fly, and now again by a spider, and acknowledge that the ways and works of God are perfectly good and wise.—London Child's Companion.

"Sore Heads."

A certain class of persons have been, not inappropriately, called "sore heads." They exist, more or less in all communities. They may be found in all parties—political, social, benevolent and moral; in the business mans, and in scientific halls; at church and away from church; in the city and in the country. "here there and everywhere;" but think Heaven! there number is not large, and they are greater enemies to themselves than to any one else.

In business, they are continually croaking about hard times. They want go ahead themselves, or let anybody else, if they can help it. Are the times good—they will insist upon it that the evil days are close at hand. This one is doing too much business; and one is spending too much money. Is money plenty—it is going to be a great deal. It money tight—it is going to be a great deal. They love to look on the dark side of the picture. They can see no bright spots; no light in the foreground, or day breaking in the distance; and worse than all, they won't let any one else see, or speak of the good things in the present, and the "better time a coming," without grumbling at that.

All political parties have their share of the sore heads. No party is without them. If they attend the meetings of the party, they go to find fault. If they stay away, they find fault with what is done. They like to see their names in print, but they do not care about paying the printer. They like to be put upon committees and think that fault-finding is their part of the duty. They may carry round a subscription paper, but never think of paying the sum set against their own names, or even collecting of those that are willing to pay, if they can get any one else to perform the duty.

But the world is not all made up of "sore heads"—men soured by disappointment, or embittered by disease,—for it may be after all, that they cannot help being what they are. No, there are hosts of cheerful and happy souls,—men of noble hearts, who cheerfully labor for the right, as they understand it, and encourage others that are struggling in the same way. If business is dull they strive to make it better. If the load is heavy they pull the harder; and thus make their own burden lighter and the whole community happier. If acting in parties, they do not set up their own will and notions as the only standard of action, and grumble about everything that is done, but cheerfully abide by the decision of the majority, and overlooking minor differences, and even personal wrongs, press on cheerfully in the work which they desire to see accomplished.—Bay State.

Magnetism.

Rev. Dr. Scoresby, when he heard of the loss of the Tayleur, an iron ship, stated to a friend that he would venture, without knowing anything of the ship but her fate, to say that she was built with her head to the north. It turned out that she was built with her head to the northeast. Dr. Scoresby was led to his conclusion by having observed that iron has magnetism induced upon it by hammering, and when the bar thus magnetized is turned in an opposite direction and hammered again, the magnetic poles are reversed. If an iron ship be built with her head to the north, the hammering will give her a magnetic polarity, which will have a certain effect on the magnetic needle of the compass. Her variations from this cause may be ascertained, and so long as the magnetic polarity of the ship continues the same, the compass may be serviceable as if it were not affected by the ship. But when the ship sails in an opposite direction to that in which she was built, her magnetic poles get reversed, and a new variation of the compass is produced. The Tayleur was sailing south-east when she struck a rock, by an error of the compass, and hence Dr. Scoresby inferred that she must have headed in an opposite direction when built, and had her poles changed by the water-hammer of the storm.

How to be Miserable.

Sit at the window and look over the way to your neighbor's excellent mansion, which he has recently built and paid for, and sigh out, "O, that I was a rich man!" Get angry with your neighbor, and think you have not a friend in the world. Shed a tear or two, take a walk in the burial ground, continually saying to yourself, "When shall I be buried here?" Sign a note for your friend, and never forget your kindness; and every day whisper to yourself, "I wonder if he will pay that note." Think everybody means to cheat you. Closely examine every bill you take, and doubt its being genuine, till you have put the owner to a great deal of trouble. Believe every shilling passed to you is but a sixpence crossed, if you should take it. Put confidence in nobody, and believe every man you trade with a rogue. Never accommodate, if you can help it. Never visit the sick or afflicted, and never give a farthing to the poor. Buy as cheap as you can, and screw down the lowest mill. Grind the faces and the hearts of the unfortunate. Brood over your misfortunes, your lack of talents, and believe at no distant day you will come to want. Let the work-house be ever in your mind, with all the horrors of distress and poverty. Then you will be miserable to your heart's content (if we may so speak) sick at heart, and at variance with all the world. Nothing will cheer or encourage you; nothing will throw a gleam of sunshine or a ray of warmth into your heart. All will be as dark and cheerless as the grave.

Cockroaches.

Nothing is made in vain; the calumniated cockroach, the pest and the detestation of housekeepers, has found an advocate in a writer who has discovered that, like almost every other animal and insect, it has its natural enemy.

He says, as people keep cats to clear their houses of mice, as hedgehogs are converted into domestic pets, that they may munch up the black beetles that swarm by night; so sometimes, it may be expedient to keep cockroaches, that they may indulge their instinct of exterminating a still greater nuisance than themselves—namely, bugs.

Webster's "Voyages of the Chanticleer" informs us that cockroaches are very plentiful at St. Helena. Previous to the ship's arrival there, the crew had suffered great inconvenience from bugs; but the cockroaches no sooner made their appearance than the bugs entirely disappeared. The cockroach preys upon them, leaving no sign or vestige where they have been; and is, so far, a most valuable and praiseworthy insect. Mr. Newman also informs us the London Entomological Society has discovered the same fact (discovered in a boarding school) that the cockroach seeks with diligence, and devours with great gusto, the common bed-bug. He is confident of his informant's veracity, but discreetly refrains from mentioning names of places.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, October 11th, 1856.

BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE.

OUR THANKS. We were made the recipient a few weeks since of a large basket of choice apples from the premises of John Wilson, Esq., of Cohasset. They were very acceptable; and we can assure the generous donor, that from their luscious appearance and delicious flavor, but a few days intervened before they disappeared. We trust Providence has prospered his efforts in this branch of the industry of the Old Bay State, as we know him to be a friend of progressive improvement, and cordially hope that his first offering is full of the promise of a large increase, and which will be made manifest to our vision and to his everlasting good.

THE EXPRESS ADVERTISER. Such is the name given to a newspaper, the fourth number of which we have received, published in Boston, tri-weekly, by Messrs. George B. Little & Co., and devoted to the interests of the Merchant, Manufacturer and Mechanic. Thirty thousand copies of this Journal are issued weekly; and its editor, whoever he may be, maintains these features of his enterprise with a power and spirit in his "editorials," that evinces a familiarity with the different subjects, worthy of emulation by other papers of far greater pretensions, and eminently deserving of liberal support from those combined branches in a generous degree.

BANK OFFICERS. At the Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Mount Wollaston Bank, the following gentlemen were elected a Board of Directors, viz:

President, Charles F. Adams.
Franklin Curtis, Francis M. Johnson, B. B. Newcomb, Joseph W. Robertson, Joseph B. Whitcher, Lewis Bass, Daniel P. Nye.

At the Democratic meeting held at the Lyceum Room on Tuesday evening last, the following gentlemen were chosen Delegates to the County and Councilor Convention to be held at Dedham, October 17.

George White, George Baxter, Nathaniel White, John Stevenson, Charles P. Tirell, Henry Wood, George Miller, George Cahill, John Parker, William Pattee, Henry G. Wildman.

The attention of the public in general, and house-furnishers in particular, are respectfully invited to read the advertisement of Messrs. John H. Pray, Sons & Co., under the appropriate head in our columns to-day. Remember, that this firm advertise Carpets, and not a "Scale of Prices," and other fanciful delusions. Give them a call before purchasing elsewhere.

ANOTHER RALLY. The Democrats it will be perceived are to have a grand rally at the Town Hall on Monday evening. "Hear all sides, and then decide."

Go to the sale of House Lots to-day by the Messrs. Edwards.

Chewder at half past 2. Sale immediately after.

For the Patriot.
Americans Read.

MR. EDITOR: As the Presidential election is near at hand, it becomes the American party to look and see, what is their duty in the coming contest. It is well known, that a part of the party has broken off from the original stock, and joined what is called the Republicans. Why have they done this? Are not the American principles the same to-day, as they were a year ago, when they were so unanimously triumphant? Most assuredly they are, and the only reason I can assign for this sacrifice of principle, is availability and office.

We are called upon by the Republicans to sustain their candidate for the Presidency, whose father was a foreigner, and a Roman Catholic, and his son, John C. Fremont, was baptized and brought up in the same religious belief, and whose nomination for the highest gift of the American people, was accomplished and brought about by foreign influence. Now I would ask in all sincerity, why should the American party sustain a Catholic, and an individual who is supported by foreign aid, and one, whose sympathies by birth and education, are diametrically opposed to all the fundamental principles of the American party? When they have in Millard Fillmore, a candidate of their own, who is worthy of their fullest confidence; an American, in every sense of the word; who originated from an old and respectable American family in the State of Vermont, and when quite young, migrated to the State of New York, and there, a poor boy, by his own individual industry as a clothier, he secured the wherewithal to cultivate his mind, and enabled him to enter the profession of the law, of which he became one of its brightest ornaments.

The Fremonters are trying hard to make out that Mr. Fillmore, is a Catholic, because he entered a Cathedral while on his European tour. And Mr. Quincy, in his remarks before the citizens of this town, the present week, seems to have received a severe shock, almost equal to an earthquake, at this alleged, misdemeanor of Mr. Fillmore. Did not Mr. Quincy, in his recent visit to Italy, enter the Catholic Church, and there bow the knee in humble adoration to the Supreme Being? Then, who has made the greatest sacrifice of Protestantism, Mr. Quincy or Mr. Fillmore? "Those living in glass houses should be careful how they fire stones."

Then again, they say, they are as good Americans as we are! If this is the case, why do they call upon the Dutch and Irish to sustain their candidate? Why did Mr. Adams in his Address at the Town Hall last week, so feelingly allude to the Herbert case, if it was not a bid for the Irish vote.

Furthermore, how many and independent these Republicans are, when they are willing to submit to such disgraceful humiliation, as sacrificing their principles and men to Gardner & Co., as they have done this week, at their District and Councilors Convention.

The creed of the American party, has always been National, not sectional; how can they then support the Republicans, which is a sectional party, made up in a great measure of fanatics and nullifiers. To corroborate this statement, I have quote the language of the Boston Traveller, a neutral paper which for its high moral tone, and lofty independence, is not surpassed by any other paper in the country. Speaking of the American party, it says:

"Purged of much of the fanaticism, and destitute of the nullification which marked its advent as a dominant party, it has come again into power, and wiser and stronger in fact, and more potent for good. The dross of the party resolved itself into a new form, and mingling with other elements, was fused into the Republican organization. The men who controlled the organization, have not, and never can have, the confidence of the people of this Commonwealth."

What mighty revolution has taken place in the minds of Wilson, Banks & Co., that they are more worthy the confidence of the citizens of this State at the present time, than last year.

Then again, among the Republican leaders, are those who have been appointed in old Puritan Massachusetts, to administer justice in the Commonwealth, advocating the un-Christian, uncivilized, and barbarous custom of duelling.

Then there are the staid clergymen of New England, thundering forth from their pulpits, the necessity of civil war in a sister State, and presenting the people with deadly weapons, with their own hands, and consecrating them with their prayers, to the unhallowed purpose of shedding a brother's blood. What are the community to expect but inevitable destruction upon the quicksands of disunion, if the Judiciary and Christianity, which were formally considered the bulwark and foundation upon which this mighty Republic was reared, are perverted to such nefarious purposes.

Then Americans awake,—and attend to your council fires; Sam, arouse, and shake off your lethargic inactivity; organize for the campaign, and let the American party show to the world, and these long heeled gentlemen, that they stand by the Union, the whole Union,—not a State caressed, not a star obliterated from the glorious constellation of the thirty-one States. Unfurl your banner, and let its azure folds waft forth the glorious intelligence that you continue to sustain, and advocate, the mighty and eternal principles of Americanism. UNION.

WHO ARE THE DISUNIONISTS? The Charleston (S.C.) Mercury, says, "There is not a single public man within the limits of the South, not one of her present R.P. RESERVATIVES or SENATORS in Congress who is not pledged to the tips in favor of DISUNION."

Preston S. Brooks, the representative of Southern character by the endorsement of the South itself, says, "If Fremont should be successful in November next, it is his deliberate opinion, that on the Fourth of March next the people of the South should RISE IN THEIR MIGHT, march to Washington, and SEIZE the archives and the Treasury of the Government."

Millard Fillmore says, "The SOUTH will not SUBMIT FOR A MOMENT to the election of Fremont." Quincy, Sept. 20. 1f

BRITISH VIEW of an interesting American question. The London Chronicle, the organ of Queen Victoria, which speaks the sentiment of the British Government, thus alludes to the subject:

"We should be sorry to see Mr. Buchanan elected, because he is in favor of preserving the obnoxious Institutions as they exist, AND THE UNITY OF THE STATES. There is no safety for European monarchial governments if the progressive spirit of the Democracy of the United States is allowed to succeed. (ELECT FREEMONT AND THE FIRST BLOW TO THE SEPARATION OF THE UNITED STATES IS EFFECTED!!)" Quincy, Sept. 12. 1f

Poetry.

Corn Husking in New England.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON, WEYMOUTH.

Our fathers were as grave a set
As e'er in social circle met;
Their numerous pious acts will prove
Their hearts were fix'd on things above.
Yet careful as their deeds will show,
For all that's useful here below;
Resolv'd their children should be free
They labor'd for posterity;
But numerous trials made them wear
The blended seal of hope and care.
Praise to the dead is a nobler race
Have never borne the human face.
The children of these staid old men,
Can look quite sober now and then;
At Fun'erals or at Church you'll see
Them show their pilgrim pedigree;
But Fortune of this favor'd shore,
Has been so lavish of her store,
For one to look exceeding grave,
Would mark him now a crusty knave.
Our prizes have been getting short,
Since Freedom her first lesson taught,
And more intent on fun and games,
The quick blood dances through our veins.
The stubble in the field is seen,
No suff'ring wretch is there to gleam;
The Indian corn, our country's pride,
Is in the barn all cut and dried.
'Twas night on deacon Symon's farm
Though cold without, 'twas warm,
The mighty chimney glow'd with light,
Yet in each corner was a seat,
Where Tom and Peter, Jake and Si,
Could sit and munch their pumpkin pie,
Assembled in the spacious room,
Some thirty damsels in their bloom,
With here and there a matron's cap,
And some with infants in the lap;
The girls have had their quilting bee,
And all is frolic, fun and glee;
But now and then an anxious eye,
Looks on the door intent, but shy—
They knew their sparks would soon appear,
To share the Deacon's liberal cheer.
The Deacon, thirty man was he,
While maids and matrons held their bee,
Had sent the boys a grand invite,
To husking in his barn that night,—
In calculation he was skill'd,
Knew how one stone two birds had kill'd,
The husking party and the bee,
At once was good economy.
But now the door is open'd wide,
And there's the Deacon—by his side
And thickly clustering in his rear,
Some dozen likely lads appear.
They come their partners to secure,
And lend them to the husking floor;
The heavy shaws are round them cast,
And no one wishes to be last;
And now they march as gay a band,
As ever walk'd the pilgrim's land.
Old Symon's barn was long and wide,
And numerous tenants there reside,—
His horses, oxen, cows and sheep,
Well hous'd and fed in quiet sleep,
But startled by the unaccounted sound,
They look with staring eyes around;
And, well they might, for such a din,
But once a year was heard within.
Before his guests a lofty pile
Of corn, awakes the Deacon's smile,
And seated round, each girl and boy
Prepares both work and sport to enjoy.
Oh hasty pudding, hominy,
And Jonny cake how good you be,
With milk and butter, fresh and sweet—
The Yankee's often welcome treat;
The Indian corn suppers it all,
A blessing both to cot and hall—
'Twas you our pilgrim fathers found,
By Indians stor'd beneath the ground;
'Twas you who in their trial hour,
Preserv'd them from want famine's power;
And we, their sons will gratefully prove,
By acts that demonstrate our love.
Now Deacon fix the lantern right,
For husking needs but little light,
And well 'tis known to every spark,
A kiss is sweetest in the dark.
Now crack your jokes and work and play,
And merrily pass the time away,
But stop my lass—a forfeit here,
Don't hide it, 'tis a right red ear
Of corn, and you my charming mine,
By husking laws, must pay the kiss—
Or if you will not pay the stake,
A dozen kisses I must take.
The Deacon cries put by that ear,
I'll plant it out the coming year;
For like produce like 'tis said,
And sounds, I wish one-half were red.
Now long and loud the laugh goes round,
Another right red ear is found,
And forlornly finds the stack,
'Till e'en the Deacon gets a smack.
At length the lofty pile is down,
The husks are on the scaffold thrown,
By willing hands the yellow corn,
Is swiftly to the gran'y borne.
And now the fiddle tunes his strings,
Each had to meet his partner's spring,
And all for dancing, wide awake,
They make old Symon's rafters shake—
And pranks and capers here are play'd,
Enough to scare an ancient maid,
Till from the house a horn is blown,
And well its import here is known,—
By careful dame the feast prepar'd,
Is waiting by them to be shar'd;
And lads and lasses quickly fly,
To taste the Deacon's pumpkin pie,
And goose and turkey, boiled and roast,
And pork and beans, and tea and toast,

* Josiah.

And fowls and ham, and mutton stakes,
And doughnuts, puddings, pies and cakes,
Are smoking on the ample board,
And Symon looks and acts the lord,
A noble sample of the race,
We look to England's patriots trace,
New England's woman proud to toil,
To bless and guard Columbia's soil.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, October 18th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

LAND SALE. Another splendid opportunity is offered by the Messrs. Edwards, as will be seen by their advertisement in this day's paper, to those desirous of acquiring eligible building lots in our thriving and pleasant village. Attend the sale and secure a bargain.

FRANKLIN. The non-appearance of our correspondent's favor was unavoidable. The press of local matter compelled us to crowd out many similar favors.

For the Patriot.
About the Lecture.

MR. EDITOR:—When this campaign commenced it seemed as if the supporters of Col. Fremont intended to make up in noise for what they were deficient in argument. They opened with the "Summer outrage," and since then have continued by weekly appeals to the passions or prejudices of their hearers. They claimed a hearing from the people, on what they called a new issue, and at the start, they went back to the old "Louisiana" question, and the "aggressions of the South," and have not got back yet to the new issue. While Mr. Quincy's address is being riddled with hot shot by your able correspondent "Franklin," they only answer with an indifferent song, sung most horribly out of time, and tune. And this is Free Soil logic!

I have attended most of the Fremont lectures, and waited patiently to hear some of the reasons by which the speakers meant to prove the necessity of forming a new party, from which any citizen residing in the southern states must be excluded, and my patience has been rewarded by hearing a great deal of hifalutien, a little smart speaking, and no reason, nor argument. Where is their great cause, and who are their great men?

The meeting on Wednesday evening possessed all the usual characteristics of a Fremont lecture, only in a greater degree. The singing was a little better than common, and the speaking much worse. As an evening's entertainment, the citizens of Quincy ought to be thankful to the officers of the club for it, but at a time when the country is agitated to its centre by a great political struggle, it is absurd to bring men to address a crowded audience, who neither understand these questions themselves, nor are capable of explaining if they did understand them. If Mr. Fremont was a candidate for admission to orders, his religion may be a fit question to pass upon; if he wanted to teach a new system of night singing then it would be proper for his friends to exhibit one of his classes as a sample of his ability in that department of science; but if he succeeds in singing his way to the White House, we may well believe that the Arabian nights stories, are veritable histories of the middle ages, and that the days of enchantment are not yet past.

Was the meeting an answer to Mr. Lovejoy's able address on Monday evening? Any of your readers can answer that question. Can they answer the arguments put forth in that address? Let them try. That address was a fair, clear, able statement of the issue; no one could misunderstand it. He stated facts, which any one having the disposition can verify; or contradict if they are untrue. Contrast his manly, able, straightforward arguments, with the unmeaning phrases, the high sounding nothings of the Fremont lecturer, commencing with Mr. Quincy's anti-Louisiana speech, and ending with Mr. Wright's attempt to prove himself a Jeffersonian Democrat.

The Ladies are scarcely a fair subject for criticism, they contributed to the amusement of the evening. But the speakers, what did they say? Very few could catch the meaning of the long prosaic speech of the first speaker. I heard something about matrons, and twice I heard "jewels," but in what connection no one could tell. He said that a little learning is a dangerous thing, and every one that heard him, agreed with him; he proved it most conclusively. He said that these few rambling ideas were the production of his own mind, of course every one knew it. Mr. Webster! well there is something in a name; but it must be mortifying to the young members of the Fremont club, so many of them could make a better speech, to see him strut his hour upon the stage, a la Forrest. Ward 4th can furnish an amateur theatre after election, if their secretary is a fair specimen.

Mr. Wright was grieved that any descendant of the pilgrims should shout for Buchanan. It may be very bad; but there is some of those old fogies in Quincy still. Their hands may be hard from toil, but their heads are as yet too clear to be led away by acting and declamation, to forget the lessons of the past. He seemed to think it too bad to charge Col. Fremont with being a Catholic, and denied it in strong terms, classing Catholicity with Mahomedanism in his opinion. Now if Col. Fremont is a good man enough otherwise for their President, if he is a good, honest, independent statesman; capable as they say he is of guiding the destinies of this nation, what folly it is to inquire about his religion. But it is important to catch the votes of the bigoted portion of his friends; and no matter how capable he may be, if he possessed all the honesty of Washington, all the ability of Richelieu, all the military genius and skill of Napoleon, and the anti-slavery feelings of Greeley, or Garrison, if he was a Catholic they would not vote for him. And these are the men who pretend to be friends of freedom. If this is a crime, and they consider it such, why is it not satisfactorily answered? His friends say that they have his authority for denying it, but he has not done so himself. A leading Catholic, the editor of the New York Freeman's Journal, says that he dare not; that if he does he will brand him as a liar. If he is a Catholic what a mean man he must be to sell his birthright, for a mess of pottage; his opinion for the doubtful chances of an election. And what a spectacle it must be before the world to see such a man elected the chief of twenty-seven millions of people. The people of France when they elected Louis Napoleon to their throne, had the shadow of a great name, and the reflection of past glory to excuse them for their act. The Fremont men present a candidate for a greater office, and if by any chance he is elected, they have a man without a name, with nothing in the past to look back upon; nothing in the present to be proud of, and a future of anarchy, confusion, and it may be, of civil war to look forward to.

Union Now and Forever.

Written for the Quincy Filmore Club.

The flag of freedom waves on high,
Our emblem and our pride;
In vain shall rampart faction try
To "let the Union slide."

Its stars are bright, and thirty-one,
In azure blue shall ride;
The rays of glory they have run,
Went "let the Union slide."

'Midst antic passion's rage,
They yet shall be our guide;
Beneath their light, undimmed by age,
The "Union will not slide."

For North and East and South and West
A phalanx side by side,
Will teach sedition's brazen crest,
"The Union shall not slide."

The nation's chief once more should be,
The man who has been tried;
And Filmore, all alike agree,
Went "let the Union slide."

Hark! Vernon's hero, from the skies—
Who freedom's foes defied—
"Remember my last words," he cries,
"Don't let the Union slide."

Old Father Time, the parent of bright eyed truth, is daily developing new facts and new theories, but among his numerous progeny no fact is more incontestable than that the success attending the introduction of G. W. Stone's Liquid Cathartic and Family Physic to the public use, is utterly without a parallel. Those families which have made the most thorough trial of its merits, are loudest and most enthusiastic in their encomiums of its virtues. It admirably meets a want long experienced by all classes of persons, and is rapidly gaining that confidence which it so richly deserves.—Lowell Courier.

BENEFACTORS OF MANKIND. It is not he who invented Brussels Carpeting or Gold Brocade, whom the masses have reason to hold in regard, but he who furnishes something useful. One of our government officials lately returned from his mission in Brazil, tells an anecdote that among the first inquiries made of him about his acquaintance with our public men, was whether he knew the American Chemist, Dr. J. C. Ayer, who invented the Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills. As these articles (more particularly the Cherry Pectoral) are in general use in the cities of South America they are the most prevalent representations of American products, and as many thousands there as well as here, owe to them the recovery of their health from insidious diseases, it is not strange they should hold the inventor in esteem, but it is rather simple in them to suppose that the Doctor is the only man of mark we have among our twenty-five million people.—Christian Advocate.

OYSTER SALOON. We learn that T. G. P. Hardwick has re-opened the room connected with H. A. Ransom's Provision Store, where he is prepared to "serve up" Oysters in different ways.

Oysters by the gallon, if desired.

On Saturdays, an excellent Clam Chowder will be prepared.

Deaths.

WHO ARE THE DISUNIONISTS?

The Charleston (S.C.) Mercury, says, "There is not a single public man within the limits of the South, not one of her present REPRESENTATIVES or SENATORS in Congress who is not pledged to the tips in favor of DISUNION."

Preston S. Brooks, the representative of Southern character by the endorsement of the South itself, says, "If Fremont should be successful in November next, it is his deliberate opinion, that on the Fourth of March next the people of the South should RISE IN THEIR MIGHT, march to Washington, and SEIZE the archives and the Treasury of the Government."

Millard Fillmore says, "The SOUTH will not SUBMIT FOR A MOMENT to the election of Fremont."

Quincy, Sept. 20.

BRITISH VIEW of an interesting American question.

The London Chronicle, the organ of Queen Victoria, which speaks the sentiment of the British Government, thus alludes to the subject:

"We should be sorry to see Mr. Buchanan elected, because he is in favor of preserving the obnoxious Institutions as they exist, AND THE UNITY OF THE STATES."

There is no safety for European monarchial governments if the progressive spirit of the Democracy of the United States is allowed to succeed.

I have now adopted this principle by which I do large goods at exorbitant prices.

not see but the same power that would execute this mandate, might enlarge the circle of its operations; nor can we cease to wonder at the moral of it, when we remember it was the vote of a Slaveholder that made John Quincy Adams President of the United States,—and that he, too, chose a Slaveholder for Secretary of State and made him the principal member of his cabinet.

FRANKLIN.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, October 25th, 1856.

TO VOTERS. We have heard that enquiries have been made by some of our citizens whose names are not on the voting list, what method they must take to have them entered. We would refer them to the notice of the Selectmen appended to the list recently published. Their course is a plain one—attended with very little trouble. All omissions can very readily be corrected. We have lists for the ensuing year, which we will cheerfully furnish gratuitously, to any who may be in want of them.

IN AID OF KANSAS. A number of the Ladies of Quincy, interested in this object, sent off on Monday, October 20th, three cases filled; there were 243 warm garments, made by themselves, and 60 pairs of brogans, and a quantity of woolen stockings purchased. The sum collected was $191 41.

HANCOCK LIGHT GUARDS. This deserving military corps of this town, visited Plymouth on Tuesday last, and passed the day much to their satisfaction, and to the general praise of their unexpected visitors. Our brother editor of the Plymouth Rock speaks highly in their favor; and we regret that other feelings which he would have gladly reciprocated, prevented our attendance.—Long life and prosperity to our friends, the Guards.

"BOSTON COMMON." This is the rather singular name given to a volume recently issued from the enterprising house of James French & Co., of Washington Street, Boston. It is a book of great interest, written in a fine style and the characters so well delineated, that all who peruse it are charmed with its ground work, and pleased moreover with the true moral which it inculcates. Buy it, and read it.

THE Fillmore Club of this town was eloquently addressed by A. B. Ely, Esq. of Newton, on Monday evening last, with much effect.

CORRECTION. In the third paragraph of the communication signed Franklin, on our first page, should read in 1811 the free states had a plurality of fifteen, in 1852 they had a plurality of fifty three—so that in that direction, &c.

For the Patriot.
Rallying Song.

Rally, rally, Freemen rally!
The battle now approaches near,
Freemen, arouse, awake and rally
For the rights you hold most dear!
Rally! Freemen! now or never!
March up to the rescue, now,
Else beneath oppression ever
Stripped of Freedom must you bow.

Rally! to preserve your Freedom!
Shrink not from the glorious cause!
Rally bravely, now, for Justice,
Equal rights and Equal Laws!
Rally! rally! from your workshops—
Mechanics! nobly rally now!
Rally Laborers! "Bone and sinew,"—
Rally, Farmer, from the plough.

Rally from the hills and mountains,—
From the valleys green and bright!
Democrats! of every hamlet,
Arm and rally for the fight!
From your firesides, Freemen rally,—
Arm and battle!—you are Free!
Young men Rally! old men Rally!
If Freemen ever you would be!

For the Patriot.
The late State Elections.

These victories should not be hailed in the spirit of a party triumph, but as a promise, of peace, good feeling, and a friendly intercourse soon again to be restored to our now unhappy and distracted country. With Mr. Buchanan at the head of our national affairs, sectional demagoguism and strife will be banished from the land; and under his firm but mild administration, "Bleeding Kansas," freed from her worst enemies, (her hypocritical sympathizers), will make rapid strides to political greatness, and at no distant day, be asking admission into the Union as a free and independent sovereign state. Every town and village throughout our vast republic, should respond to this sentiment, and forever set aside those small, grovelling politicians, whose bigotry and intolerance, would crush out every vestige of civil and religious freedom from among us, and resolve to support no man for any public trust, no matter how trivial, or what his former political predilections may have been, who cannot rise above the local prejudices of fanatics—and whose principles are not as broad as the Union itself.

MILLINERY ESTABLISHMENT. Mrs. Kenison, in connection with her Millinery Rooms in this town, has opened at 252, Washington Street, Boston, an extensive Millinery Store, where we can assure our citizens who may be in want of articles usually kept in such establishments, that they will find it for their interest to make a call. The latest fashions may always be consulted.

A CARD.

Per order of the Company,
WILLIAM S. GLOVER, Com.

WHO ARE THE DISUNIONISTS? The Charleston (S.C.) Mercury, says, "There is not a single public man within the limits of the South, not one of her present REPRESENTATIVES or SENATORS in Congress who is not pledged to the lips in favor of DISUNION."

Preston S. Brooks, the representative of Southern character by the endorsement of the South itself, says, "If Fremont should be successful in November next, it is his deliberate opinion, that on the Fourth of March next the people of the South should RISE IN THEIR MIGHT, march to Washington, and SEIZE the archives and the Treasury of the Government."

Millard Fillmore says, "The SOUTH will not SUBMIT FOR A MOMENT to the election of Fremont."

BRITISH VIEW of an interesting American question. The London Chronicle, which speaks the sentiment of the British Government, thus alludes to the subject:—"We should be sorry to see Mr. Buchanan elected, because he is in favor of preserving the obnoxious institutions as they exist, AND THE UNITY OF THE STATES. There is no safety for European monarchial governments if the progressive spirit of the Democracy of the United States is allowed to succeed. ELECT FREMONT AND THE FIRST BLOW TO THE SEPARATION OF THE UNITED STATES IS EFFECTED!!!"
Quincy, Sept. 12. 1w

SPIRITUAL MMEETING. It will be seen by reference to our column on notices, that Mr. Rice will speak in the trance state upon this subject. We have been requested to call particular attention to this meeting, as one calculated to afford more than usual interest to Spiritualists.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 16th inst., Mrs. Sarah Adams, widow of late Mr. Charles Adams of Boston, aged 70 years.
On the 16th inst., Nancy S., daughter of Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Margaret Petridge, aged 3 years and 3 months.
On the 20th inst., Mrs. Sarah Gay, widow of the late Mr. Ebenezer V. Gay, aged 76 years.

On the 8th inst., Mrs. Mary Aroline, wife of Mr. Charles H. Kimball, and daughter of Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Sarah Newcomb, aged 24 years and 8 months.
Earth is not our home! Of this we are constantly reminded when we see the changes that are daily taking place around us. We see to-day the young, those in the morning of life, whom we think will take our place, and share our active duties, as we recede from its cares; but before the morrow, the sad reality is forced upon us, that they have passed away, and left us only their memory and counsel; that which may have been hallowed by suffering, to deepen and permeate our very lives!

But there is a brighter side to this picture of life and its changes! and doubly so, when like her of whom we now speak; who could in so short a space of time be reconciled to this unexpected removal from earth,—obeying with resignation the will of Him, "who doeth all things well,"—could so confidently, amid the pleasant associations of the first year of wedded life, and her childhood home, give the parting counsel, and "good bye," to companions, parents, sisters and friends, with gentleness, wishing them to mourn not for her, but pursue their daily avocations with cheerfulness,—that she was impatient for that release from bodily suffering which would make her an inhabitant of the brighter home above.

Truly earth is not our home! Else why, when sickness and suffering comes upon us, do we, like the infant, nestle still closer to the Parent or Protector,—clinging to that unseen but ever present Father. Oh! there is a beautiful link between earth and heaven which attracts by its ever living realities; which, like true friendship in the hour of peril and danger, clings still closer, entwining itself so closely around the heart, that even death itself loses its power! It attracts, as the world fades away; or lends a brighter hue to the affliction of an earth-life. It reconciles us to God and his wise arrangements; though dark they may seem for the present, yet he has the power to make them shine forth even to you, companions, parents and friends, with a brightness not of earth.

Accept it then, and look upon the bright side of the picture so vividly drawn in your lacerated heart. Think of her beautiful and childish confidence in God, who could, in possession of so much to live for, resign all, feeling it far better to go to that "home," where sickness would not come, and were the flowers of affection and hope would ever bloom in perennial beauty. A. J. K.

Poetry.

The Pass of Death.

It was a narrow pass,
Watered with human tears,
For Death had kept the outer gate
Almost six thousand years.
And the ceaseless tread of the world's feet
Was ever in my ears—
Thronging, jostling, hurrying by,
As if they were only born to die.

A stately king drew near,
This narrow pass to tread,
Around him hung a gorgeous robe,
And a crown was in his hand.
But death with a look of withering scorn,
Arrested him and said,
"In humbler dress must the king draw near,
For the crown and the purple are useless here."

Next came a man of wealth,
And his eye was proud and bold,
And he bore in his hand a lengthy scroll
Telling of sums untold:
But death, who cared not for rank,
Careth as little for gold—
"Here that scroll I cannot allow,
For the gold of the richest is powerless now."

Another followed fast,
And a book was in his hand,
Filled with the flashes of burning thought
That are known in many a land;
But the child of genius quailed to hear
Death's pitiless demand—
"Here that book cannot enter with thee,
For the bright flash of genius is nothing to me."

Next came a maiden fair,
Whose cheeks were glowing bright,
That shone within you strange sweet care,
Should you meet on a summer night;
But death, ere the gentle maid passed through,
Snatched away its light—
"Beauty is power in the world," he said,
"But what can it do in the Pass of Death?"

A youth of sickly mien
Followed in thoughtful mood,
Whose heart was filled with love to God
And the early brotherhood;
Death felt he could not quench the heart
That lived for others' good—
"I own," cried he, "the power of love,
I must let it pass to the realms above!"

The Blighted Harvest.

A blight came o'er, a blight came o'er
My harvest field so fair and wide;
The blackened grain was cast aside—
The ploughshare hid forever more,
Each vestige of my joy and pride.

It was the staff on which I leaned—
I watched its growth day after day—
What golden dreams are and it lay!
How green, and fair, and strong it seemed!
Now from the earth 'twas swept away.

Yet ever all, yet ever all—
The bitter grief which tortured me—
A soft voice said consolingly:
God careth for the sparrow's fall;
Will he not love and care for thee?

The gentle voice I heeded not;
My eyes were filled with unshed tears;
I thought of those poor blighted ears;
Earth seemed a poor and barren spot,
And blighted too were all my years.

October's sun, October's sun
Shed golden radiance on the land;
My glowing cheeks the breezes fanned,
I who had stood faint hearted once,
And seen his ship wrecked on the strand.

I stood among the waving corn
Which grew upon the blighted field;
O God, how glorious was the yield!
For me, who laughed poor Hope to scorn,
Who saw his dream forever sear.

Forever green, forever green
The memory of that field shall be;
My heart is strong and brave and free;
I have a staff which never lean—
A staff which never faileth me.

Double Life.

Man hath two lives: the one of patient toil,
Of ceaseless toil with the stubborn ground,
Of battling with the busy sea's turmoil,
With stubborn metals and the awful sound;
The other is a maze of vision'd things,
Infinitely fill'd up with shapes ideal;
Of gentle thoughts or wild imaginations,
Of shadowed bliss, or terrors grimly real,
And all the winged spirit may conceive
Of human happiness or heavenly wonder.
O, bliss is he who best can interweave
This earth toil with images sublime;
And dwell in common things such glories under.

Most hapless he who wrecks his weary time
In each apart; and rends these things asunder.

Anecdotes.

An old lady looking at the curiosities in a museum, came to a couple of seadogs; and, after gazing at them with wonder, inquired of a wag who stood near by, if they barked.
No, madam, said the wag; their bark is on the billow.

Have you read my last speech? said a prosy orator, the other day to a friend.
I hope so, was the satisfactory reply.

A fellow stole a saw, and on his trial told "he judge he only took it in joke."
How far did you carry it? asked the judge.
Two miles, answered the prisoner.
Ah, that's carrying the joke too far! remarked the judge, and the prisoner got three months' unrequited labor.

Papa, have you got legs?
No.
How do they kick, then?
With their breeches, my son.

As a lady was walking, a gentleman's button caught in the fringe of her shawl. Some moments elapsed before they were separated. I am attached to you, madam, said the gentleman, good humoredly, while he was indisputably trying to get loose.
The attachment is mutual, sir, was the good-humored reply.

W. STONE'S VEGETABLE LIQUID CATHARTIC AND FAMILY PHYSIC.

THE most important discovery ever made in Medical Science, being a compound of pure and agreeable ingredients, ever offered to the public, the necessity of such a medicine has long been felt in the family of medicine and physicians. Its advantages over cathartics given in the form of Pills or Powders, must be obvious to every intelligent person. It operates more immediately and safely upon the system, and at the same time is absolutely non-detrimental to the system, being altogether free from the deleterious effects of the others, which are so often resorted to, but which have fatal consequences, leaving the bowels in a state of irritation, and the system in a state of debility. It is a certain cure for piles, regulates the action of the liver, forces the stomach from indigestion, restores the whole system, and removes the cause of all local pains such as

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, TIC DOLLOREUX, GOUT, Pain in the Head, Side, Stomach, &c. &c.

It may also be relied upon in all diseases of the bowels—DYSENTERY, DIARRHŒA AND COLERA MORBIDA, which attend to its ingestion. Again we repeat, TRY IT!—It is another recommendation. No family will be without it, if they have properly tested its merits. Readers, if you have tried other remedies without success, if you are suffering from any of the above named diseases, or from any of my Liquid Cathartic will cure you. Would you have tried from medical authorities, then you will find that it is a certain cure for all the above named diseases, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or other diseases, two bottles will free you from them. The Herring Pie.

It was a cold winter's evening; the rich banker Brounker had drawn his easy chair close to the corner of the stove, and smoking his long clay pipe with great complacency, his intimate friend, Van Grote, employed in exactly the same manner, occupied the opposite corner. All was quiet in the house, for Brounker's wife and children were gone to a masked ball, and secure from fear of interruption, the two friends indulged in a confidential conversation.

I cannot think, said Van Grote, why you should refuse your consent to the marriage. Berkenrode can give his daughter a good fortune, and you say that your son is desperately in love with her.

I don't object to it, said Brounker. It is my wife who will not hear of it.

And what reason has she for refusing?

One which I cannot tell you, said his friend, smiling in voice.

Oh! a mystery—come, out with it. You know I have always been frank and open with you even to giving you my opinion of your absurd jealousy of your wife.

Jealousy of my wife? nonsense! have I not just sent her to a masked ball?

I don't wonder you boast of it. I should like to have seen you do as much when you were first married. To be sure you had reason to look sharply after her, for she was the handsomest woman in Amsterdam. Unfortunately she has become the better horse, and you refuse an advantageous match for your son to gratify her caprice.

You are quite wrong, my friend. I never allow any one to be master here but myself; and in the present instance I cannot blame Clotilda. The secret of her refusal lies in a herring pie.

Herring pie!

Yes a herring pie. You may remember it was a favorite dainty of mine, and that my wife could not endure the smell of it. Well, during the first year of my marriage, I must confess that I was a little—a very little—jealous of Clotilda. My situation obliged me to keep open house, none gave me so much uneasiness as the handsome Col. Berkenrode. The reputation that he had already required for gallantry was enough to create alarm, and the marked attention he paid my wife convinced me it was well founded. What could I do? It was impossible to forbid him the house, for he had it in his power to deprive me of the government contracts; to ruin me. After pondering deeply on the subject, I decided on doing nothing until the danger should become imminent; all that was necessary was to know how things stood. Having just purchased this house, I caused a secret closet to be made behind the stove here. It communicates with my private room, and from it I could hear everything that passed in this department without risk of being discovered. Thank God I have had no use for it the last twenty years, and indeed, I do not know what has become of the key. Satisfied with this precaution, I did not hesitate to leave Clotilda when any of her admirers paid her a visit, though I promise you that some of the Colonel's gallant speeches made me wince.

Upon my word, interrupted his friend, you showed a most commendable patience. In your place I should have contented myself with forbidding my wife to receive his visits.

There spoke the old bachelor. As I didn't want to drive headlong into his arms, I went a different way to work. Day after day I was forced to listen to the insidious arguments of the seducer. My wife—I must own she made a stout defence—at one time died ridicule, at another, entreaty, to deter him from the pursuit of her. He began to lose hope in proportion as I gained it, till one day he bethought himself of threatening to blow out his brains if she would not show him some compassion. Moved at this proof of the length of his passion, she burst into tears, and pleaded that she was not free—in short, she gave him to understand that I was the obstacle to his happiness. Berkenrode was too well skilled in art of seduction not to see that he had gained a point. He raved, cursed me as the cause of his misery, and tried to obtain a promise from her in case she should become a widow. She stopped him peremptorily; but I never closed an eye that night, nor Clotilda, though she did not know I watched her, was as uneasy as myself. On the following day, a circumstance occurred that increased her agitation. While at breakfast, a message came from the cook asking to see me alone. I desired him (as I was not in the habit of interfering with domestic affairs) to communicate his business in my wife's presence. When the man entered he was as pale as a ghost, and scarcely seemed to know what he was about. At last he told me that he had received a packet containing a small bottle, three hundred gilders and a note, in which he was requested to put the contents of the former into the first herring pie he should prepare for me. He was assured that he might do so without fear, as the contents of the bottle were quite harmless and would give a delicious flavor to the pie. An additional reward was promised if he complied with the request and kept his own counsel.

The honest fellow, who was much attached to me, said he was convinced that there must be something wrong in the affair, and should not be happy till the bottle and money were out of his hands. I poured a few drops of the liquid on a lump of sugar, and gave it to my wife's lap-dog. It fell into convulsions, and died in a few minutes. The case was now plain; there had been an attempt to poison me. Never shall I forget Clotilda's pale face as she threw herself weeping into my arms.

Poison! A murder! she exclaimed, clasping me as if to shield me from danger; Merciful heaven, protect us both!

I consoled her with the assurance that I was thankful to my unknown enemy, who was the means of showing me how much she loved me. That day Berkenrode came at the usual hour; but in vain did I take my seat in the hiding place; he was not admitted. I afterwards found that she had sent him a letter, threatening if he ever came again that her husband should be informed of all that had passed. He made many attempts to soften her resolution, but to no purpose, and a year afterwards he married. No acquaintance has ever existed between the families; and now you know why my wife refuses her consent to her son's marriage with Berkenrode's daughter.

I cannot blame her, said Van Grote. Who would have thought that Berkenrode, a soldier, a man of honor, could have been capable of such a rascally deed?

Ha! ha! ha! laughed Brounker; and do you really think it was the General who sent the poison?

Why, who else?

Myself to be sure! The whole was my own contrivance, and it cost me three hundred gilders as a present to my cook; but it was money well laid out, for I saved my wife and got rid of her troublesome lap-dog at the same time.

Do you know, Brounker, I think it was rather a shabby trick to leave Berkenrode under such an imputation; and now that your son's happiness depends on your wife being undeceived—

I am aware of all that, but to undeceive her now is not so easy as you think. How can I expect her to disbelieve a circumstance in which for the last twenty years she has put implicit faith?

What I interrupted by the entrance of Mrs. Brounker. Her cheeks were flushed, and she saluted Van Grote rather stiffly.

What! not at the ball, Clotilda? asked her husband.

No, I had a bad headache, she replied, and Manrice has promised to take charge of his sisters. But I have come to tell you that I have been thinking over his marriage with Mina Berkenrode, and have altered my mind on that subject. In short, I shall withdraw my opposition to the match.

The friends looked up to each other in astonishment.

By the bye, she continued, here is a key I found some time ago; I think it must belong to you.

Well, Clotilda, said her husband, striving to hide his confusion as he took the key, this is good news about the marriage.

Suppose you and your friend celebrate it by a supper. There is a herring pie in the house, and you need not fear it is poisoned. She left the room. Brounker looked foolish, and Van Grote rubbed his hands as he exclaimed—

Caught in your own trap! He who digs a pit for his enemy shall fall into it himself.

Nevertheless, replied Brounker, I think I have got well out of mine.

Asking Questions.

The Yankee nation, as we all know, is famous for asking questions. This is objected to them, as a fault, and laughed at, as ridiculous. Whether it is either one, or the other, may be better understood after a slight analysis. Consider first, that putting an interrogatory implies knowledge. A man must have some knowledge to qualify him to ask for knowledge. He also thereby betrays a disposition to know more than he does, which is of itself a valuable trait, far removed from the stupid contentment of ignorance and dullness, and from the superciliousness of conceit, which is almost as great an obstacle to improvement, as want of capacity to learn.

Curiosity, or the passion for putting questions, not only supposes the possession of faculties for progress in the questioner, but the very practice of asking questions argues an ability and a willingness in the community where it prevails, to answer them. This is high praise; whereas incurious and stolid taciturnity when people happen to be thrown together, is a mark of little disposition to be wiser, or little hope of being so from anything the population among whom he is thrown is likely to afford. Silence among persons accidentally met displays either a lack of useful curiosity or thirst for information on the part of any of the company; or else it shows that, though some exceptions exist of those who would be happy to increase their stock by conversation, the rest of the crowd don't know enough to impart useful information, or are too ill-mannered or crabbled to do it.

It is not difficult to decide which characteristics of a population are most useful or agreeable. From one you stand a chance to carry away many ideas worth knowing. From the other, there may be, or may not be, the power of instruction; but it is certain it has not been exerted, and all parties on separating, are no wiser or better for the meeting.

Congressional Nomination.

MASS. CONGRESSIONAL DIST. NO. 3. }
Sept. 27, 1856.

A. B. ELY, Esq., Newton.

Dear Sir:—The undersigned, a Committee of the Delegates of the Congressional Convention of District No. 3, have the honor to tender to you, in behalf of said Convention and others, the nomination for Congress from that District.

We have confidence, that as a National man, you will better, perhaps, than any other, concentrate the conservative elements of the District, and represent the real regard of its citizens for the Constitution; while we believe that, as a Massachusetts man of education and experience, you will understand and appreciate the large commercial, mechanical and manufacturing interests of our people, and would be prepared to represent those interests with energy, and to vindicate their claims to public care and protection with success. Farther, we are assured that as a Northern man, in earnest sympathy with the cause of liberty, in that arena where the battle of freedom against slavery is to be fought and won, you would be able, from your known ability and fearlessness, to accomplish practically, what many others theoretically, but actually weak, have failed to do—while as an American you would endeavor to see that no improper influence should injuriously affect the integrity of our free institutions.

With sentiments of true regard, we remain,

Yours,

NEWTON, Oct. 2, 1856.

Gentlemen—Your letter tendering in behalf of the convention of delegates and others of the Third District, the nomination of Representative to Congress is before me.

Truly grateful for the honor, and the very flattering terms in which you address me, I feel somewhat at a loss to know in what manner I ought to reply.

I believe I have never avoided a responsibility, nor have I knowingly deceived any one as to my views. Yet the tongue of deduction and personal animosity has for many months so unceasingly maligned my motives, and misrepresented my opinions, that many have been led, unintentionally, to do me great injustice and cruel wrong, in their estimate of my real position and principles. You will therefore pardon me if I take the opportunity to say something upon the subjects to which you allude, and in such order as I may find convenient.

The all absorbing topic of the present day is Slavery, and no man should hesitate on all proper occasions to meet it honestly and fearlessly. With slavery I have, and can have no sympathy. I would ever oppose it to the fullest extent of my constitutional ability; particularly would I oppose its encroachment upon territory once consecrated to Liberty. I would meet all aggressions with firmness, and repel them with energy and an unwavering will.

You are right when you say that the battle between freedom and slavery must be fought in the Halls of Congress. There the time-honored compact of the Missouri Compromise was wantonly and wickedly broken;—there the means for healing the outrages that have been since perpetrated, against the provisions of even the odious Kansas Nebraska bill have been, for party purposes denied; there the resulting evils must be cured, and the cruel wrongs redressed; and there the rights of free labor must be vindicated and assured. For those wrongs so unparalleled and so unmitigated, not the South alone, but also the North, is deplorably responsible.—But for the treachery of recreant Northern men we should not now be struggling even on the verge of civil war for that which was our own by solemn compact, and by actual purchase; but from which the attempt is made to drive us by violence and fraud. To the North then it belongs to retrieve the wrong she has done, and to regain what she has so foolishly and so wickedly lost, in such manner as she best may without violating the rights of others, and without compromising her own.

Kansas must be free. Let the North send forth men who will honestly and constitutionally strive to advance her true interests, regardless of fleeting party triumphs, and her safety is assured. Once removed from the centre of the fierce strife of party warfare, once dropped as the shuttlecock of party battlers and demagogues, and she will be free. Impartial protection to bona fide settlers will make her free, and all patriotic men will cry amen.

But Massachusetts has other interests at stake; interests of vast magnitude that demand both watchful wisdom and energetic action to care for and promote. Our commercial, mechanical and manufacturing interests are enormous in value and vast in extent. They enter into every relation in life, and effect all our social and domestic comforts, as well as our civil and political influence. Our own district feels the want of that intelligence and practical knowledge which, understanding its various wants, would jealously watch and successfully strive for the promotion and prosperity of the industrial labors and pecuniary investments of its constituency. It is well to remember Kansas; but it is not well either to forget Massachusetts, or to be unable to advance the vast and varied interests that underlie her prosperity, and that have made her what she is.

Our beloved Commonwealth, for many years from the beginning, exerted a controlling influence in and upon the councils of the nation;—not from her magnitude or the number of her people; but because she entrusted her interests to her best minds, and commanded respect and consideration from the force of her intelligence, and the power of her practical genius. When she fails to do thus she loses her prestige, and losing that, necessarily loses much of her prosperity in the conflict with other and rival interests. Massachusetts will stand or fall only by her force of intellect and practical skill, and she needs men of sagacity armed at all points to promote her interests at home as well as abroad.

Massachusetts belongs yet to the Federal Union. Her interests are bound up with it, her welfare is staked in it. Her obligations to it believe she will repay with undying devotion to its integrity, and unwearied labors for its perpetuity. While she will vindicate her own rights, she will also perform all her duties; for she knows that only so long as she does the latter will the former be respected.

As a National man and an American, I desire to see the people of this Republic cultivate and cherish a sincere and ardent nationality, founded on a nice sense of honor, an earnest love of country, and a true devotion to the interests and welfare of this our native land. As citizens, and in the exercise of citizens duties, all national badges, other than American, should be forever discarded. We should be truly American citizens, and the great American responsibility of preserving and perpetuating our liberties and our free institutions, in all their purity, with an open Bible and free schools, should be met and fulfilled, honestly, intelligently, faithfully.—I feel there should be a union of sentiment and of action on these subjects. There must be such union at some time, if not now.

Such are my views; and while in answer to your letter I do not feel at liberty absolutely to decline the tendered nomination, I shall reserve the right to withdraw my name if at any time it may be thought that some other person can better fill the place.

With sentiments of great respect,

I remain yours,

A. B. ELY.

To S. DEWING, JR., DWIGHT GRAVES, and others, Committee.

Is there an Open Polar Sea.

The appearance of Dr. Kane's long expected narrative of Arctic Expeditions, will again awaken an interest in the question of an open sea near the North Pole; for his discovery of that sea, with the varied details of every circumstance connected with it, can now be investigated, and the evidence of its continuance to the pole of the earth, be duly weighed.

The idea of a warmer region near the North Pole, which must be accompanied by open water, and as a natural consequence with animal life, in a greater abundance than in the permanent ice-belted district farther South, is not a new one. More than two centuries ago, the appearance of open water in the highest latitudes first suggested it; and although certain theorists contended against it, the opinion continued to prevail even to our day; and now, although there has been nothing certain of the existence, there have been such accumulative facts, that it duly awaited the indubitable evidence, such as Dr. Kane has presented to establish the theory.

The Dutch whalermen above and around the island of Spitzbergen have often pushed through the drift ice into open spaces of sea towards the pole, and Baron Von Wrangel, when forty miles from the coast of Arctic Asia, saw, as he thought a vast illimitable ocean, beyond, and we doubt not, many navigators, without being aware of the fact, have really been in this sea, but who did not dare to venture further towards the mysterious pole. Dr. Scoresby, among others, may be mentioned as one who has been within its area. This veteran Arctic navigator was engaged for more than thirty years in the Greenland fishery and discovered the coast, and served on the eastern side which bears his name. On this occasion he passed the floating ice, by keeping near the Greenland coast, and found himself in open water beyond. Had he been prepared to pursue his voyage, he might have pushed on nearer the pole than any navigator before or since, but he did not dare venture beyond a point from which he was uncertain of escaping before the season had passed, and therefore retreated through the pack.

Capt. Parry, in his well-known first voyage, attempted to cross this floating ice, and was well provided for the purpose; but it was unfortunately harder and rougher than he anticipated, and, although making progress northward over the drift, he found that it was actually bearing him Southward. The projectors of that expedition thought the plan the most feasible one to reach the pole, entertaining the belief that if they could pass this floating ice, they would find an open sea beyond.

It must here be remarked, that in the summer, north winds prevail in these seas; and aided by a strong current setting to the South, the whole mass of ice accumulated and forced in during the winter, breaks up and is carried toward the South. This belt of broken ice, or the "pack," as it is called, forms the only impediment to an approach to the pole by the North Atlantic ocean. In the fall, when strong southerly winds prevail, such of this pack as remains is again forced back toward the pole, in a measure filling up the open sea from which it had come; but whether there are lands or resisting currents near the pole to prevent its accumulation there, or whether a warmer temperature exists to dissolve it, remains to be seen.

Dr. Kane wintered in Smith's Strait near the 79th parallel. From this point the following spring he sent parties over the ice northward about one hundred and twenty-five miles in a direct line, when they came to an open sea to 81 30, and on the western side to 82 30, approximately. At this far remote point, and from a height of four hundred and eighty feet, which commanded a horizon of nearly forty miles, the cars of the party "gladdened with the novel music of the dashing waves and a surf, breaking in among the rocks at their feet, which stayed farther progress." Farther north, the channel expanded into an iceless area, and taking thirty-six as the mean radius open to reliable survey, this sea had a justly estimated extent of more than four thousand square miles.

This was in the month of June, yet there was every indication here that this water had been open during a most severe Arctic winter; for the shores did not have the "ice-belt" which elsewhere in Smith's Strait indicates alike, both permanent and annual freezing. Animal life, too, to which Dr. Kane had been a stranger to the South, now burst upon the party. Geese and ducks were abundant, particularly the Brent goose, a migratory bird, which the Doctor had seen on his previous voyage in Wellington Channel, when they were flying towards the South. The rocks and the shore were crowded with sea-swallows, whose habits require open water, and which were then breeding; in fact, to use the Doctor's words, "it was a picture of life all around." Of plants, there is less said, as the season was too early for their development. This increase of animal and vegetable life, with the rise of the thermometer in the water and the melted snow upon the rocks, were indicative of milder climate towards the pole.

Another fact worth dwelling on is, that after a severe gale of several days from the north, there was no accumulation of floating ice, which is strong evidence that there was warmer water from whence the wind came without ice, and that from an elevation of five hundred and eighty feet, the open sea was "still without a limit and moved by a heavy swell, free of ice."

In view of these highly interesting facts the intrepid navigator does not venture to discuss the phenomena which give rise to them.

"How far," observes the doctor, "this sea may extend,—whether it exists simply as a feature of the immediate region, or as a part of the great and unexplored area communicating with the Polar basin,—and what may be the argument in favor of one or the other hypothesis, or the explanation which reconciles it with established laws, may be questions for men skilled in scientific deductions. Coming as it did, a mysterious fluidity in the midst of vast plains of solid ice, it was well calculated to arouse emotions of the highest order, and I do not believe there was a man among us who did not long for the means of embarking upon its bright and lonely waters."

We have little doubt that the interesting facts made known by Dr. Kane will lead to another Arctic expedition. At some future day we may recur to the subject again and venture to suggest some ideas towards a plan for reaching the mysterious pole.

The Turn of Life.

Between the years forty and sixty, a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered as in the prime of life. His matured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to attacks of disease, and experience has given soundings to his judgment. His mind is resolute, firm and equal; he assumes the mastery over business; builds up a competence on the foundation he has formed in early manhood and passes through a period of life attended by many gratifications. Having arrived a year or two past sixty, he arrives at a critical period in the road of existence; the river of death flows before him, and he remains at a stand still. But athwart this river is a viaduct, called, "The Turn of Life," which if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of "old age," round which the river winds, and then flows beyond without a boat or causeway to, effect its passage. The bridge is, however constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden whether it bend or break. Gout, apoplexy, and other bad characters are also in the vicinity to waylay the traveller, and thrust him from the pass; but let him gird up his loins, and provide himself with a fitting staff, and he may trudge on with safety with perfect composure. To quit metaphor, "The Turn of Life," is a turn either into a prolonged walk or into the grave. The system and powers having reached their utmost expansion, now begin either to close like flowers at sunset, or break at once. One injudicious stimulant, a single fatal excitement, may force it beyond its strength; whilst a careful supply of props

Within her reach were the most delicate viands and exquisite fruits, yet she could partake of none. Health was no longer hers. She had parted with it for the sake of gratifying her vanity, by wearing thin shoes, to display the beauty of her foot, and now, when consumption, was preying upon her, she repented her folly, but it was too late; and though she would willingly give all that she possessed, the priceless treasure could not be recalled. The thin, glassy looking gentleman, who reclines in his luxurious easy chair with his gony foot upon a pillow, sighs and groans in anguish, and thinks of the many weary nights of pain, when the bed of down and the silken covering could bring him no repose. How he envies the plough-boy who whistles on the green fields, whose step is elastic, and whose heart is light and gay at his toil, while his sleep at night is sound and refreshing.

What is wealth to the invalid but a bitter mockery which can yield no happiness. Then prize the rich boon of health, ye who possess it, and lift your hearts in gratitude to God, even though your lot may be one of poverty and toil.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

JUVENILE OFFENDERS. Our young friends are perhaps not aware that in defacing or removing bills or printed notices of any description, which have been regularly posted to our community, they are violating a wholesome law, and laying themselves open to a prosecution. We have heard frequent complaints of this nature of late, from certain quarters, and therefore, if the nuisance is not abated, that stringent measures will be taken to correct the evil.

GRAND RALLY. The Democrats of this town were addressed on Wednesday evening last, by that long-tried and faithful exponent of Democratic principles, Arthur W. Austin, of West Roxbury, the Democratic nominee for Congress, and Whiting Griswold, one of the Democratic Presidential Electors at large. Each address was to the point; cogent, argumentative, and illustrative of the great truths of Democracy.

SCHOOL RECEPTIONS. At a meeting of the School Committee, held the 13th of June last, the following votes were passed: Resolved, That the Teachers in the several Schools in this town shall not suspend their scholars on any regular school-day, without permission from the Committee.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate the above vote to the Teachers.

Resolved, That the Teachers, Oct. 23d inst.

For the Patriot.

To the Rescue.

MR. ENGLISH.—The day of battle is close at hand. Not since the Revolution of '76 has there been a crisis in National affairs equal to the present. Fellow Democrats, and Union men of all parties, are you ready to meet it? Are you willing to sacrifice all minor differences and prejudices, and come forth in one solid phalanx to sustain the Constitution and the Union, and by doing this, defeat the geographical party?—A party which Washington so fervently admonished the American people to put down, wherever and whenever it attempted an existence upon American soil? Then as Union Men and true lovers of our country's welfare, let us unite upon good and true National men, without distinction of party, and nominate candidates for the next Legislature that will vote to blot out the treasonable Personal Liberty Law from the Statute Book; and give voice to our feeling and disunion congressmen the privilege of remaining at home.

Union men,—Rally; and strike for your country's cause; when, since her National existence has she come forth in a more supplicating voice, than at the present time, for you to sustain and support her, and her sacred institutions? See to it, Union men and Democrats, that not a vote is lost, and that every name is correctly on the voting list, and have every man early at the polls, and there show your steadfastness to principle, and your devotion to patriotism, by wiping out the dark deeds, and foul stains, from of Massachusetts once fair escutcheon; and annihilate all sectional agitation throughout the land.

Fellow Democrats and Union men, we have everything to encourage us. The recent elections have given us the next Congress, and have tolled the death knell to fanaticism, nullifiers and disunionists. And next Tuesday we will go forth and preserve the glorious Constitution and the country, by the sure antidote, the will of the people. — From the Arctic north, to the sunny South, from the mighty Atlantic to the sister Pacific, the citizens can rejoice in one country, one Union. The home of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Webster, Calhoun and Clay, can congregate together in one harmonious and fraternal embrace.

A FINE OPPORTUNITY. Any of our patrons wishing for a good and pleasant Tenement should not fail to examine the residence of James S. Randlett, situated on the Brantree and Weymouth Turnpike, and within ten minutes' walk of the Railroad Depot, which he offers for sale on reasonable terms. For further particulars see his advertisement in our columns.

CANARY BIRDS. Two of these vocal choristers,—of this year's raising,—in fine plumage, most amicably mated, and unrivalled songsters, are offered for sale by a friend of ours. For particulars, enquire at this office.

There is no safety for European monarchial governments if the progressive spirit of the Democracy of the United States is allowed to succeed. ## Poetry.

The Blind Piper.

The blind man stood in the crowded street
With a tear in his sightless eye—
In the throng, where the merry and careworn met.
He piped as they passed him by.
The maiden fair
With her sunken hair,
Hammed over the air he played;
"A world of woe,
We come and go,
Was all the reply she made."

The lover turned as he caught the tune—
He had sung the same in the busy June,
"Nestle the mellow light of the full-orbed moon,
Half-watching and half-afraid,
Willing to woo as she stood by his side,
Willing to win her his beautiful bride,
Loving her more than all treasures beside,
He passed him by and prayed—
"God defend me from woes like these,
Beggared, unloved, yet cured by disease."

The blind man saw not the haughty sneer,
As the carriage of Dives rolled
With a heavy sound, and the new-born Peet
Rode by in the pride of Gold.
Their hearts were too busy to think of him,
Albeit they wished for good;
A beggar, whose hopes and eyes were dim,
Was not of their brotherhood.

But another gave from his simple store,
For the sight, not the sound, was sad;
He gave but a mite, he could do no more,
"Twas only a little he had,
Then the angels in heaven looked down and smiled,
And the Seraph at God's right hand,
Said, "Blessed is he, who by men reviled,
Still keeps his Lord's command."

The evening shadows silent and still Fell over the busy town;
A quiet reign upon meadow and hill,
And the Autumn leaves were brown
The song of the birds had died away,
For the gayeone had flown.
Like friends that cheer in a summer's day,
But at Winter leave us alone.

No wonder his heart mourned over his birth,
No wonder his eyes were dim,
For hope on earth, nor joy, nor mirth,
No longer could comfort him.
An exile here from the sunny skies
Where the olive and orange bloom,
The light of life put out with his eyes,
Immured in a living tomb.

Autumn.

The dying year! the dying year!
The heaven is clear and mild;
And withering all the fields appear
Where once the verdure smiled.
The summer ends his short career;
The zephyr breathes farewell;
And now upon the closing year
The yellow glories dwell.

The radiant clouds float slow above
The lake's transparent breast;
In splendid foliage all the grove
Is faultlessly dressed.

On many a tree the autumn throws
Its brilliant robes of red;
As sickness like the cheeks of those
It hastens to the dead.

That tinge is flattering and bright,
But tells of death like this;
And they, that see its gathering light,
Their lingering hopes dismiss.

O, thus serene, and free from fear,
Shall be our last repose;
Thus, like the Sabian of the year,
Our latest evening close.

My Mother's Bible.

This book is all that's left me now—
Tears will unbidden start;
With faltering lips and throbbing brow
I press it to my heart.
For many generations past,
Here is our family tree;
My Mother's hand this Bible clasped,
She, dying, gave it me.

Ah, well do I remember those Whose names these records bear;
Who round the hearth-stone used to close
After the evening prayer,
And speak of what these pages said,
In tones my heart would treasure;
Though they are with the silent dead,
Here are they living still!

My Father read this holy book
To brothers, sisters dear;
How calm was my poor Mother's look,
Who learned God's word to hear!
Her angel face—I see it yet!
What thrilling memories come!
Again that little group is met
Within the walls of home!

Thou truest friend man ever knew,
Thy constancy I've tried;
When all were false I found thee true,
My counsellor and guide.
Thy mines of earth no treasures give
That could this volume buy;
In teaching me the way to live,
It taught me how to die.

Anecdotes.

At a spiritual meeting, Balaam was called up and asked if there were any jackasses in his sphere?
No, replied he, indignantly, they are all on the earth.

Now, papa, tell me what is humbug?
It is, replied papa, when mamma pretends to be very fond of me, and puts no buttons on my shirt.

At a firemen's supper at Burlington, a gentleman gave the following toast:—
Ladies of 56, like the firemen's bucket, well hooped and like firemen, delighting in the exhibition of their hose.

CELEBRATED LINIMENT.

TRIUMPHANT.

Equally Good for MAN or BEAST!
HAS triumphed where all other external ap- plications have failed to have any benefi- cial effect. It is justly acknowledged to be the greatest EXTERNAL REMEDY in the world, and its sale is unsurpassed in the annals of medi- cine. Unlike most other popular medicines of the day, it is used and recommended by many eminent members of the Medical Faculty; their prejudices having yielded to the many indisputable demonstrations of cures it has performed where all other remedies have failed. Hundreds of certificates might be given show- ing almost unnumbered cases of Rheumatism— Neuralgia—Spinal Complaints, &c., and in Bruises, Burns, Flesh Wounds, disloca- tions, &c., &c.,—but a FAIR TRIAL is all that is required to convince the most skeptical of its merits. See Circulars.

Prepared by J. S. & J. E. SELDEN, Had- dam, Conn., and sold by druggists throughout the U. S. and Canada.

AYER'S

CATHARTIC PILLS
OPERATE by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action. They remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, and by restoring their irregular action to health, correct, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first causes of disease.
An extensive trial of their virtues, by Professors,
Physicians, and Patients, has shown cures of dangerous diseases almost beyond belief; were they not substantiated by persons such as would not be deceived, and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth.
Their certificates are published in my American Almanac, which the Agents below named are pleased to furnish free to all inquiring.

Annexed we give Directions for their use in the
complaints which they have been found to cure.

FOR CONSTIPATION.—Take one or two Pills, or such quantity as to gently move the bowels. Constipation is frequently the aggravating cause of Piles, and the cure of one complaint is the cure of both. No person can feel well while under a costive habit of body. Hence it should be, as it can be, promptly relieved.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, which is sometimes the cause
of Costiveness, and always uncomfortable, take mild
doses—from one to four—stimulate the stomach
and liver into healthy action. They will do it, and the heartburn, bodyburn, and sourness of dyspepsia
forget what cured you.

FOR A FULSTOMACH, or Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, which produces general depression of the spirits and bad health, take four to eight Pills
at first, and smaller doses afterwards, until activity
and strength is restored to the system.

FOR NERVOUSNESS, SICK HEADACHE, NAUSEA,
Pain in the Stomach, Back, or Side, take from four to eight pills on going to bed. If they do not operate sufficiently, take more the next day until they
do. These complaints will be swept out from the system. Don't wear these and their kindred disorders because your stomach is full.

FOR SCURF, ERYSIPELAS, and all Diseases of the Skin, take the Pills freely and frequently, until the bowels course. The eruptions will generally soon begin to diminish and disappear. Many

Poetry.

Cornfields.

When on the breath of autumn breeze
From pastures dry and brown
Goes floating like an idle thought
The fair white thistle-down,
O then what joy to walk at will
Upon the golden harvest hill!

What joy in dreamy ease to lie
Amid a field new shorn,
And see all round on sunlit slopes
The piled-up stacks of corn,
And send the fancy wandering o'er
All pleasant harvest fields of yore.

I feel the day—I see the field,
The quivering of the leaves,
And good old Jacob and his house
Binding the yellow sheaves;
And at this very hour I seem
To be with Joseph in his dream.

I see the fields of Bethlehem,
And reapers many a one
Bending unto the sickle stroke,
And Boaz looking on;
And Ruth the Moabitess so fair,
Among the gleaners stooping there.

Again I see a little child
His mother's sole delight,
God's living gift unto
The kind good Shunamite
To mortal pains I see him yield,
And the boy bear him off the field.

The sun bathed quiet of the hills;
The fields of Galilee,
That eighteen hundred years ago
Were full of corn, I see;
And the dear Saviour takes his way
Mid ripe ears on the Sabbath day.

O golden fields of bending corn,
How beautiful they seem!
The reaper folk, the piled-up sheaves
To me are like a dream.
The sunshine and the very air,
Seem of old time and take us there.

Summer and Winter.

Ah! those are very pleasant days,
The days we spent together,
Come back through memory's golden haze,
On cloudless summer weather!
That I may deem I've saved at least
Some fragments from life's scattered feast.

We wandered past the shallow stream,
And through the new-mown hay;
Each hour was like some glorious dream
From Paradise astray.
The scent of roses on the air
Seemed part of life which was so fair.

We roamed amid the thick green wood—
Through the cool pleasant trees;
And ah! this world seemed very good
With all its memories.
I never saw the moon so bright
As through the boughs that summer night.

And now I hear the bitter rain
Sweep from the angry heaven,
As blindly 'gainst the window pane
The withered leaves are driven;
Then faint and lone the moon appears,
All dim, like one who smiles through tears.

That ghostly moon's uncertain light
Flung o'er the garden roses—
The starless sorrow of the night—
The waiting of the breeze;
Ah me! it was another earth
Where summer reigned in light and mirth.

And love, so pleasant, although brief,
Was made a summer day,
Departing ere the falling leaf,
And autumn's mellow rays;
Nor does it seem so very strange
That we, like all things else should change.

Our dream has vanished as it came;
Some hours of care it snatched,
Perchance we played a dangerous game,
But well the players matched.
Without reproach in either heart,
We clasp cold hands and so we part.

When We Husked the Corn.

October scorching fires the trees,
And naked lies the shivering vine;
White dimly o'er the distant seas
The fading lights of summer shine.
Along the line the negro blows
Deep summons on his boudoir horn,
And homeward troop the girls and boys
From husking of the corn.

I mind we well that autumn day,
When, five and twenty years ago,
We turned our labor into play,
And husked the corn for neighbor Lowe.
Ah! wife, we were the blightest pair
That e'er to wedded love were born;
For I was gay and you were fair,
A husking of the corn.

Anecdotes.

A worthy old English farmer, who most thoroughly detested taxes and tax-gatherers, was once called on by a collector at a second time for taxes he had once paid, but for which he had mislaid the receipt; and as he told the story to his friend,

Would you believe it, sir, the fellow began to abuse me.
Well, said his friend, what did you do?
Do! Why I remonstrated with him.
And to what effect?
Well, I don't know to what effect, but the poker was bent.

A young couple were sitting together in a romantic spot with birds and flowers about them, when the following dialogue ensued—
My dear, if the sacrifice of my life would please thee, most gladly would I lay it down at thy feet!
O, sir, you are too kind! But it just reminds me that I wish you'd stop using tobacco.

Can't think of it. It's a habit to which I am wedded.
Very well, sir; as you are already wedded to tobacco, I'll take good care you are never wedded to me, as it would be bigamy.

CELEBRATED LINIMENT.

Equally Good for MAN or BEAST!
HAS triumphed where all other external applications have failed to relieve the most painful external remedy in the world, and its sale is unsurpassed in the annals of medicine. Unlike most other popular medicines of the day, it is used and recommended by many eminent members of the Medical Faculty; their judicious having yielded to the many indisputable demonstrations of cures it has performed where all other remedies have failed.

Hundreds of certificates might be given showing almost unnumbered cures in cases of Rheumatism—Neuralgia—Spinal Complaints, &c., and in Bruises, Burns, Flesh Wounds of all kinds, old Sores, Sprains, Broken Bones, dislocations, &c., &c.—but a FAIR TRIAL is all that is required to convince the most skeptical of its merits. See Circulars.

Prepared by J. S. & J. E. SELDEN, Haddam, Conn., and sold by druggists throughout the U. S. and Canada.

Insurance against Fire.

"New Orleans, 25 April, 1854.
"Sir: I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and family have been very much benefited by your medicines. My wife was cured, two years since, of a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. My children have several times been cured from attacks of the Influenza and Croup by it. It is an invaluable remedy for these complaints. Your CATARRHIC PILLS have entirely cured me from a dyspepsia and constipation, which has grown upon me for some years;—indeed, this cure is much more important, from the fact that I failed to get relief from the best Physicians which this section of the country affords, and from any of the numerous remedies I had taken.

"You seem to us, Doctor, like a providential blessing to our family, and you may well suppose we are not ungrateful. Yours respectfully,
LEAVITT THAXTER."

"Senate Chamber, April, 25th, 1854."
"Dr. J. C. AYER—Honored Sir: I have made a thorough trial of the CATARRHIC PILLS, left me by your agent, and have been cured by them of the dreadful Rheumatism under which I have been suffering. The first dose relieved me, and a few subsequent doses have entirely removed the disease. I feel in better health now than for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATARRHIC PILLS. Yours with great respect, LUCIUS B. METCALFE."

The above are all from persons who are personally known where they reside, and who would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

AYER'S

PILLS
Are curing the Sick to an extent never before known of any Medicine.

INVALIDS, READ AND JUDGE FOR YOURSELVES.
JULIUS HAZEL, Esq., the well known perfumer, of Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, whose choice products are found at almost every toilet, says:

"I am happy to say of your CATARRHIC PILLS, that I have found them a better family medicine, for common use, than any other within my knowledge. Many of my friends have realized marked benefits from them, and coincide with me in believing that they possess extraordinary virtues for driving out diseases and curing the sick. They are not only effectual, but safe and pleasant to be taken—qualities which must make them valued by the public, when they are known."

The venerable Chancellor WARDLAW writes from Baltimore, 15th April, 1854:
"Dr. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have taken your Pills with great benefit, for the listlessness, languor, loss of appetite, and Bilious headache, which has of late years overtaken me in the spring. A few doses of your Pills cured me. I have used your Cherry Pectoral many years in my family for coughs and colds with unfailing success. You make medicines which cure, and I feel it a pleasure to commend you for the good you have done and are doing."

JOHN F. BEATTY, Esq., Sec. of the Penn. Railroad Co., says:
"Pa. R. R. Office, Philadelphia, Dec. 13, 1853."
"Sir: I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficacy of your medicines, having derived very material benefit from the Cherry Pectoral and Catarrhic Pills. I am never without them in my family, nor shall I ever consent to be, while my means will procure them."

The widely renowned S. S. STEVENS, M. D., of West-worth, N. H., writes:
"Having used your CATARRHIC PILLS in my practice, I certify from experience that they are an invaluable purgative. In cases of disordered functions of the liver, causing headache, indigestion, constiveness, and the great variety of diseases that follow, they are a sure remedy than any other. In all cases where a purgative remedy is required, I confidently recommend these Pills to the public, as superior to any other I have ever found. They are sure in their operation, and perfectly safe—qualities which make them an invaluable article for public use. I have for many years known your Cherry Pectoral as the best Cough medicine in the world; and these Pills are in no wise inferior to that admirable preparation for the treatment of diseases."

"Dr. J. C. AYER—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted from my birth with scrofula in its worst form, and now, after twenty years' trial, and an untold amount of suffering, have been completely cured by a few weeks of your Pills. With what feelings of rejoicing I write can only be imagined when you realize what I have suffered, and how I am now."

"Never until now have I been free from this loathsome disease in some shape. At times it attacked my eyes, and made me almost blind, besides the excruciating pain; at others it settled in the scalp of my head, and destroyed my hair, and has kept me partly bald all my life; sometimes it came out in my face, and kept it for months a raw sore."

"About nine weeks ago I commenced taking your Catarrhic Pills, and know not a day has passed since, when I have not felt better, and my skin is fair, and my hair has commenced a healthy growth; all of which makes me feel already a new person."

"Hoping this statement may be the means of conveying information that shall do good to others, I am, with every sentiment of gratitude,
Yours,
MARIA RICKER."

"I have known the above named Maria Ricker, from her childhood, and her statement is strictly true."
ANDREW J. MESERVEE,
Overseer of the Portsmouth Manufacturing Co.,
Capt. JOEL PRATT, of the ship Marston, writes from Boston, 20th April, 1854:

"Your Pills have cured me from a bilious attack which arose from derangement of the Liver, which had become very serious. I had failed of any relief by my Physician, and from every remedy I could try, but a few doses of your Pills have completely restored me to health. I have given them to my children for worms, with the best effects. They were promptly cured. I recommend them to a friend for constiveness, which had troubled him for months. He took them in a few days, and this cure was already a new person."

"Reading this from the distinguished Solicitor of the Supreme Court, whose brilliant abilities have made him well known, not only in this but the neighboring States, I feel that I have great satisfaction in assuring you that myself and family have been very much benefited by your medicines. My wife was cured, two years since, of a severe and dangerous cough, by your CHERRY PECTORAL, and since then has enjoyed perfect health. My children have several times been cured from attacks of the Influenza and Croup by it. It is an invaluable remedy for these complaints. Your CATARRHIC PILLS have entirely cured me from a dyspepsia and constipation, which has grown upon me for some years;—indeed, this cure is much more important, from the fact that I failed to get relief from the best Physicians which this section of the country affords, and from any of the numerous remedies I had taken."

"You seem to us, Doctor, like a providential blessing to our family, and you may well suppose we are not ungrateful. Yours respectfully, LEAVITT THAXTER."

"Senate Chamber, April, 25th, 1854."
"Dr. J. C. AYER—Honored Sir: I have made a thorough trial of the CATARRHIC PILLS, left me by your agent, and have been cured by them of the dreadful Rheumatism under which I have been suffering. The first dose relieved me, and a few subsequent doses have entirely removed the disease. I feel in better health now than for some years before, which I attribute entirely to the effects of your CATARRHIC PILLS. Yours with great respect, LUCIUS B. METCALFE."

The above are all from persons who are personally known where they reside, and who would not make these statements without a thorough conviction that they were true.

Miscellaneous.

Discovering a Leak.

Please, mim, the butter is all out, said Nancy, thrusting her face into the door of the room where Mrs. Peabody sat sewing.

Impossible! was the lady's reply. Impossible, Nancy.

Indade, mim, and there ain't enough for supper.

What has become of it Nancy? asked Mrs. Peabody. I bought four pounds day before yesterday. It's impossible. It can't be all gone.

Faith and alive, Mrs. Peabody, and sure it has been used.

Never!

The lady was positive in her assertion that the butter had not been fairly disposed of; while Nancy quite as positively maintained the affirmative of the question at issue between them. The result was, Mrs. Peabody had to buy more butter, and continue in darkness as to the way and means by which four pounds of that necessary article of table comfort had vanished in about two days.

The white sugar is all out, said Nancy after breakfast on the next morning.

The white sugar out! Are you certain, Yis, indade. There ain't the full of a teacup in the house.

Didn't Mr. Brown send home ten pounds of sugar on Saturday?

I don't think there were ten pounds, mim.

Well, I do, then. I know there were ten pounds. We always get ten pounds at a time. Are you sure that there is none in the box?

Sure and sartin, mim.

It's very strange! Ten pounds of white sugar in five days. What have you done with it, Nancy?

Me done with it, mim! And do yaes mane to insinuate that I wouldn't act honestly?

I don't insinuate anything, Nancy; I only ask what has been done with ten pounds of sugar in five days? It was placed in your keeping, and it's gone. Now I only desire to know how it has been disposed of.

It's been used in the family, in course, said Nancy.

No; that is impossible. We only use white sugar for tea and coffee twice a day. Ten pounds properly taken care of, ought to last two weeks.

Not if the children are allowed to ate it as they do.

Who allows them to eat it. I am sure I don't, said Mrs. Peabody.

I can't keep them from it, replied Nancy. The children never ate all that sugar.

Well, mim, it's gone, said Nancy.

And that was all the satisfaction Mrs. Peabody could get.

Not only did sugar and butter vanish thus unaccountably, but flour and meal, soap and other things too various to mention.

I can't stand this, said Mr. Peabody, when his quarter bill of groceries came in. One hundred and forty-eight dollars.

Not that much, surely, said Mrs. Peabody.

Yes; one hundred and forty-eight. We never had a bill like this before.

Isn't there some mistake? Perhaps Mr. Brown has sent you the wrong bill and pass book.

Mr. Peabody referred to the cover of the pass book and read—

Henry Peabody, in account, &c. It's our book, you see.

There's something wrong, persisted Mrs. Peabody.

That I will readily admit, replied her husband. But where is it?

May be the book is not added up right, suggested the lady.

Mr. Peabody hurriedly added up page after page of the book.

All correct as far as that is concerned.

Then we're charged with more than we received, said Mrs. Peabody.

No; I don't believe that. But to be certain let me read off the different articles.

This was done; and Mrs. Peabody could not positively say that any charge was wrong, although the entries of tea, sugar, coffee, oil, butter and lard were remarkably frequent.

If it's all come into the house it hasn't all been eaten, said Mrs. Peabody, in a positive tone of voice.

Then there must be a leak somewhere, said her husband.

I'm afraid there is; but how are we to discover it? Nancy is a very extravagant cook, and lays a heavy hand upon every thing. I believe she wastes more than her wages come to.

She must have a heavy hand to make things go after this fashion. Are you sure she is honest?

I have seen nothing to make me think differently.

Have you talked to her about the way things go?

Oh, yes, replied Mrs. Peabody; over and over again. But it does no good. She declares that everything comes to the house is used in the house; and what then can I say?

I shouldn't like to accuse an innocent person of stealing.

It is rather a serious matter to accuse any one of that crime. But there is a leak somewhere and we must find it.

I wish I knew how to find it, said Mrs. Peabody, despondingly.

Human ingenuity is equal to anything.—We must find the leak, Anna.

And in good earnest Mr. and Mrs. Peabody set to work to find the leak.

Among the frequent visitors of Nancy, the cook, was a woman who always carried a basket and wore a cloak. This person Mrs. Peabody often met in the kitchen, and as she was introduced as a poor woman in bad health, with several young children, the lady's feeling were interested in her favor, and she often make her presents of old clothing, and sometimes gave her flour and tea.

Nancy had known this woman in Ireland, and spoke of her as having seen better days. Particularly did she dwell upon the honest character she had borne at home. In this way a very favorable impression was made on Mrs. Peabody.

Had she on an old brown camlet cloak? Yes.

Oh, she is a poor woman who comes to see Nancy sometimes.

And does she always bring her basket along? inquired Mr. Peabody.

Why do you ask that? said the lady.

I guess you'll find the leak you spoke of there.

Oh, no, oh no! I don't believe that old creature would take anything which was not given to her.

That may be. But are you fully advised as to the extent of Nancy's generosity?

I don't believe she would take anything unless it was cold meat or broken bread.

Have you ever looked into her basket? No.

How often does she come? Two or three times a week I believe.

Oh, mother! spoke up a bright looking boy, who was an attentive listener. She is here every day, and sometimes twice a day.

Indeed! You are sure of that, Harry? said Mr. Peabody.

Oh, yes, sir.

Did you ever see Nancy give her anything?

I saw her put a great chunk of butter in her basket yesterday.

Indeed!

Yes, sir.

Anything else?

Some papers. I don't know what was in them, though.

Did Nancy see you when she did this? asked Mr. Peabody.

No, sir. I was looking in at the window.

Henry is mistaken. I can't believe it, said Mrs. Peabody in a positive tone of voice.

It will be an easy matter to settle. The next time she comes take the liberty to look into her basket.

No; I would not like to do that.

Look into the basket, Anna, and my word for it you will find the leak.

Mrs. Peabody shook her head most positively at this suggestion.

If I catch her here I shall most certainly do it, said the husband.

You'll only hurt the old woman's feelings. It is bad enough to be poor, without having suspicion added thereto.

Poverty is no crime; but carrying off pounds of butter, sugar and flour, not to mention a dozen other things, can hardly be called honest.

I don't believe she does it, Henry.

It would be more agreeable to know that she does not than to let the present state of doubt remain. If you don't look into her basket I will.

Not a long time passed before Mr. Peabody had the opportunity he desired. A little earlier than usual he came home on the next day; and just as he reached his own door up from the basement area came the old woman with the basket. Said basket had a dark piece of woolen cloth, or baize, covered over it, and was, moreover, partly concealed under the woman's cloak. Nancy had come out with her and stood in the area. Neither of them saw Mr. Peabody at first, but he soon manifested presence; for the moment he saw the woman he stepped up to her, and drawing the covering from the basket, said—

What have you here?

Mr. Peabody spoke in a quick, stern voice.

Nancy, the moment she saw what he had done, turned and went back hurriedly into the house; the woman stood for a moment with a face of dismay, and then, dropping the basket, beat a hasty retreat.

I thought I'd discover the leak, said Mr. Peabody, as he entered his wife's room, bearing in his hand the old woman's basket, which, on examination, was found to contain, besides various other articles, the following, fully recognized as the property of Mr. and Mrs. Peabody:

One pound of butter; about a pound and a quarter of loaf sugar; three links of sausages and one loaf of bread. Of the tea and coffee in papers, the freshly cut half pound squares of soap, the nutmegs, and the dozen other little matters of the kind, it was uncertain whether they had been abstracted from this or some other house in which a leak existed.

Mrs. Peabody was confounded; and so was Nancy, when summoned from the kitchen. Of course Nancy had no suspicion that the old woman was dishonest, and stoutly maintained that not an article found in her basket had been taken from Mrs. Peabody's kitchen.

Rather doubting this, with so much evidence heretofore, Mrs. Peabody had the resolution to dismiss Nancy on the spot; and the effect was effectual in stopping the leak. After that butter and sugar went twice as far as before, and the next quarterly bill for groceries reached only the sum of eighty-one dollars.

In more families than that of Mr. Peabody's would a leak be discovered if old women visitors to the kitchen, with cloaks and baskets were occasionally overhauled. There are a goodly number of them about, and the way they make grocery bills run up is afflicting too many whose purse is not deep, and well filled with California at that.

The Marriage Relation.

The great secret is to learn to bear with each other's failings; and not be blind to them—that is either an impossibility or a folly. We must see and feel them. If we do neither, they are not evils to us, and there is obviously no need of forbearance; but to throw the mantle of affection round them, concealing them from each other's eyes—to determine not to let them chill the affections—to resolve to cultivate good-tempered forbearance, because it is the only way of mitigating the present evil—always with a view of ultimate amendment. Surely it is not the perfection, but the imperfection, of human character that makes the strongest claims in love. All the world must approve, even enemies must admire, the good and the estimable in human nature. If a husband and a wife estimate only that in each which all must be constrained to value, what do they more than others? It is infirmities of character, imperfections of nature, that call for the pitying sympathy, the tender compassion that makes each the comforter, the monitor of the other. Forbearance helps both to attain command over themselves. Few are the creatures so utterly evil as to abuse a generous confidence, a calm forbearance. Married persons should be pre-eminently friends, and fidelity is the great privilege of friendship. The forbearance here contended for is not weak and wicked indulgence of each other's faults, but such a calm, tender observance of them as excludes all harshness and anger, and takes the best and gentlest methods of pointing them out in full confidence of affection.

Loving and Forgiving.

Man has an unfortunate readiness, in the evil hour after receiving an affront, to draw together all the moon-spots on the other person into an outline of shadow, and a night-piece, and to transform a single deed into a whole life; and this only in order that he may thoroughly relish the pleasure of being angry. In love, he has fortunately the opposite faculty of crowding together all the light parts and rays of his object into the focus, by means of the burning glass of imagination, and letting its sun burn without its spots; but he too generally does this only when the beloved, and often censured being is already beyond the skies. In order, however, that we should do this sooner and oftener, we ought to act like Winklemann, but only in another way. As he, namely, set aside a particular half-hour of each day for the purpose of beholding and meditating on his too happy existence in Rome, so we ought daily or weekly to dedicate and sanctify a solitary hour for the purpose of summing up the virtues of our families, our wives, our children and our friends—and viewing them in this beautiful crowded assemblage of their good qualities. And, indeed, we should do so for this reason, that we may not forgive and love too late, when the beloved beings are already departed hence, and are beyond our reach.—

Jean Paul Richter.

Gait, an Indication of Character.

Observing persons move slow—their heads move alternately from side to side, while they occasionally stop and turn round. Careful persons lift their feet high, and place them down flat and firm. Sometimes they stoop down, pick up some obstruction, and place it quietly by the side of the way. Calculating persons generally with their hands in their pockets, and their heads slightly inclined.

Modest persons generally step softly for fear of being observed. Timid persons often step off from the side-walk on meeting another, and always go round a stone instead of stepping over it. Wide-awake persons "too-out," and have a long swing to their arms, while their hands shake about miscellaneously.—

Careless persons are forever stubbing their toes. Lazy persons scrape about loosely with their heels, and are first on one side of the walk and then on the other. Very strong minded persons have their toes directly in front of them, and have a kind of stamp movement. Unstable persons walk fast and slow by turns. Venturous persons try all roads, frequently climb the fences instead of going through the gate, and never let down a bar. One-idea persons and very selfish ones "too-in." Cross persons are apt to hit their knees together. Good natured persons snap their thumb and finger every few steps. Fun-loving persons have a kind of a jug movement. Absent minded persons often take the wrong road, and sometimes find themselves up to their knees in a mud puddle, although the side-walks are excellent. Dignified men move slow and erect. Fast persons cut across corners, kick every dog they meet, knock down the little children, run against the ladies, and hit every twelfth man's ribs with their elbows. Very neat men occasionally stop to wipe the dust from their boots—their hands hang by their sides. Very polite persons are sometimes seen bowing in their course to black servant girls and black stumps.

Curious Facts.

Serpents are said to obey the voice of their master. The trumpeter-bird of America, follows its owner like a spaniel, and the jamaica acts as a guard to poultry, protecting them in the field, all the day from birds of prey, and escorting them home at night. In the Shetland Isles there is a gull which defends the flock from eagles; it is therefore regarded as a privileged bird. The chamois, bounding over the mountain, are indebted for their safety in no small degree, to a species of pheasant. The bird acts as the sentinel; for as soon as it gets sight of a man, it whistles, upon hearing which, the chamois, knowing the hunters to be near, sets off at full speed. The artifices which partridges and plovers employ to delude their enemies from the nest of their young, may be referred to as a case in point, as well as the adroit contrivance of the hind, for the preservation of her young; for when she hears the sound of dogs, she puts herself in the way of the hunter, and starts in a direction to draw them away from her fawns. Instances of the effect of grief upon animals, are no less remarkable. The writer already cited says: I knew a dog that died of sorrow at the loss of his master; and a bullock that abstained from singing ten entire months, on account of the mistress's absence. On her return it resumed its song. Lord Kaimies relates an instance of a canary, which, while singing to a mate, hatching her eggs in a cage, fell dead; the female left the nest, and finding him dead, rejected all food, and died by his side.

The Value of Fresh Air.

The human lungs possess upwards of one hundred and sixty-six square yards of respiratory surface, every single point of this vast surface is in contact with the atmosphere inspired. Let us then consider the quantity of air which is daily presented to this surface. It will, of course, vary according to age, constitution, and mode of living. The quantity of air received at an ordinary inspiration, without any effort at all, is, according to Dr. Smith, about one pint. Considering eighteen respirations to take place in one minute, about eighteen pints of pure air are necessary for sustaining life during that short period. One little minute of healthful life cannot be enjoyed without about eighteen pints of pure air being diffused over that wonderful extent of delicate capillary network connected with the lungs. The quantity requisite for an hour of health will thus be 1080 pints. And, to continue the calculation, during one day's healthful existence, 25,920 pints, or no less than 60 hog-heads of pure atmosphere, must enter the lungs; and this is allowing but one pint for each inspiration, and but eighteen inspirations for each minute, though it must be clear to all, that during active exercise it frequently happens that in one minute of time more than twice eighteen inspirations take place, and considerably more than a pint of air enters the lungs at a single inspiration.

Now, this immense volume of air is so purpose to give life to the liquid essence of our food—life to the dead blood. Until acted upon the atmosphere, the fluid which is traversing the lungs is, to all intents and purposes, dead; and, consequently, totally incapable of repairing worn structures, of carrying on functions, or maintaining any vitality in the system; nay, it even contains in its elements a considerable quantity of pernicious poison, brought to the lungs to be given out in the act of breathing lest it should kill the human fabric. The poison alluded to is carbonic acid. To breathe in an atmosphere of carbonic acid, is death, as rapid as it is certain.

Allow me to remind you that in the human body the blood circulates once in two and a half minutes. In two and a half minutes all the blood contained in the system traverses the respiratory surface. Every one then, who breathes an impure atmosphere two and a half minutes, has every part of his blood acted upon by the vitiating air. Every particle has become less vital, less capable of repairing structures, or of carrying on functions; and the longer such air is inspired the more impure it becomes, and the more corrupt grows the blood. Permit me to repeat, that after breathing two and a half minutes an atmosphere incapable of properly oxygenating the fluids which are traversing the lungs,

Apothecary Store.

every drop of blood in the human being is more or less poisoned; and in two and a half minutes more, even the minutest part of all man's fine wrought organs has been visited and acted upon by this poisoned fluid—the tender, delicate eye, the wakeful ear, the sensitive nerves, the heart, the brain; together with the skin, the muscles, the bones throughout their structure, in short, the entire being. There is not a point in the human frame but has been traversed by vitiated blood—not a point but must have suffered injury.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, November 15th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

QUINCY CHARITABLE SOCIETY. The Annual Meeting of this Society was held on Monday evening, Nov. 5th, when the following persons were elected officers for the year ensuing:—

President—Rev. Nelson Clark.
Vice President—Rev. G. N. Bradley.
Secretary—Miss M. J. Turner.
Treasurer—M. M. Frederick.
Directors—Dr. J. Marden, Benjamin Curtis, Mrs. B. Curtis, Mrs. John Faxon, Mrs. Eliza Baxter, Mrs. H. N. Glover, Mrs. H. Faxon, and Miss Ann Curtis.

Mr. Stephen Morse, Jr., declined a re-election. The following report of the Treasurer was read and accepted:—

Amount of Receipts	$98 05
Amount of Appropriations	93 70
Leaving in the Treasury	$4 35
Number of families assisted	fifteen.

DISAPPOINTMENT. One of our fair daughters who felt somewhat pleased at the election of James Buchanan for our next President, and who wished to aid the Democratic party in making a grand celebration of the same, in this town, on Wednesday last, and who had toiled hard all day in preparing for a magnificent illumination of her father's mansion, from cellar to attic, was sadly disappointed, after waiting for hours in silent suspense to catch the sound of the music, to find that there was no torch-light procession that evening. We think this true-hearted lady ought to enter the White House on the fourth of March next, and we hope some of our noble Democratic brethren will exercise their influence in her behalf.

CHANGE OF PROPRIETORS. Mr. Bunney the late proprietor of the Hancock House, in this town, has retired from the management of this establishment, and Mr. Webb, of Maine, whom we hear spoken of very favorably, has succeeded him. It is no easy task, with the fastidious notions of some people, to preside over such an establishment, so as to give entire satisfaction to all—but we have the assurance in our new landlord, that no pains will be spared by him to sustain the former good character of the house, to render it a welcome home to the weary traveller, and a pleasant and social retreat for our citizens.

THE ELECTION has resulted in the choice of the Democratic nominee, James Buchanan, for the Presidency. The party claim him by what they call a strong vote—174 out of 246 of the electoral ballots, which is within 4 votes as many as General Jackson received at his first election. They have likewise the House and Senate by decided majorities, so that they will have things pretty much their own way. Well, as the party has administered the Government the past fifty years, we think they may be trusted with it for four years longer.

NEW WORK. We have received the advance sheets of a new work, called the "Humors of Falcon Bridge," by Jonathan F. Kelly.

It was published by T. B. Peterson, of Philadelphia. The illustrations are excellent, the paper of the first quality, and the type clear and distinct. From a specimen of the contents of the work we should judge it to be entertaining, and also instructive. The stories are well told, and the anecdotes pithy and humorous. It will give to the reader many pleasant moments during the long winter evenings that are close at hand.

THE DEMOCRACY of our village were quite jubilant on Wednesday last, at the result of the late election. A brass cannon, (a snaky little thing) spoke in unmistakable tones (which must have been heeded by the most incredulous) the achievements of the party. It was quite an enthusiastic demonstration of the friends of Mr. Buchanan. We dropped in upon them at their social gathering at the Hancock House in the evening, and found them in excellent spirits, with a bounteous table spread before them, and with enthusiasm enough left to elect another President: We came very near committing ourselves, for we do like to see people make themselves happy, even if it is against our pre-conceived opinions.

By reference to our column of notices it will be seen that the Lyceum course of lectures have commenced, and with a very popular class of speakers.

For the Patriot.

Victory.

Mr. EATON: Victory is ours, and the Democracy is triumphant; she stands, where she has ever stood in all the most trying emergencies of her country, by the Constitution and the Union. What a thrill of joy vibrated through the heart of every true Northern Democrat, when the welcome and glorious news of her success was received from the Old Keystone State, the home of James Buchanan, and the valiant South, and the giant West, sealing forever the doom which awaited Fremont and his condottors.

The Democrats of the Old Bay State, ought to rejoice at their success, — last year, Mr. Beach, the liberal candidate for Governor, received some over thirty-four thousand votes, (probably four or five thousand of these votes were from the liberal party), making the Democratic vote about thirty thousand. At the election on Tuesday, of last week, Mr. Buchanan's vote was over thirty-seven thousand, giving a handsome Democratic gain of seven thousand! this ought to be a source of great rejoicing by the Democracy of Old Massachusetts, placed as she has been in the hot-bed of Abolitionism, fanatics and disunionists. The clergy and the press generally heralding forth the alleged iniquity of the Democratic party, and the outrageous wrongs of bleeding Kansas,—and Mr. Sumner brought home on the eve of election in gorgeous pomp and princely display, to lay his bleeding head on the excited bosom of Massachusetts, for the purpose of crushing out every vestige of Democracy; the success of which can be seen in the above handsome gain of the Democratic party in the State.

The New England States have voted in a body for Fremont; this is nothing new,—at the election of Mr. Jefferson, for the Presidency, these States, with the exception of Vermont, all voted against him; and also in a body voted, without a single exception, against the old hero, Andrew Jackson. In the admission of Louisiana, and the war of 1812, they deserted the Democratic party, and called a Convention of the several states to meet at Hartford, Connecticut, December 14, 1814, to form a Northern Confederacy; they met at this Convention, and when assembled, their general complaint, was, that they were fearful they should lose the balance of power, and could not control the United States—hence the necessity of a Northern Confederacy. The sixth article of their printed proceedings speak for itself:—

"SIXTHLY: The admission of new states into the Union, formed at pleasure in the Western region, has destroyed the balance of power which existed among the original States, and deeply affected their interests."

Why should the New England States refuse the pioneers of the West the privilege of coming into the Union, and enjoying the same immunities and advantages with themselves? they were not slave Territories and no attempt had been made to make them such. The only reason why it so "deeply affected their interests," was the loss of usurped power.

The Democracy of this town met last Wednesday evening, at the Hancock House, and had a glorious time in exchanging patriotic sentiments and speeches, and shaking the coroll and friendly hand as hand never shook before, over the urn's ashes of the geographical party, and sectional agitators. Fellow Democrats of Quincy, you constitute one of the banner towns of the Old Commonwealth; well may you rejoice,—what a halo of pleasure coursed through your veins, when the big gun, that venerable trophy of the old French War, re-echoed and re-echoed amid your granite hills and fertile plains, the glorious and mighty victories of Democracy.

This Institution has now a large MEDICAL OFFICE AND LABORATORY at 36 Broomfield Street, and several boarding houses for the accommodation of patients from abroad. A newspaper has been established advocating this system of practice. It is entitled "Nature's Arcana," of the "Scientific Indian Physician." It is published monthly for fifty cents a year.

There are also connected with this Institution, Bathing Rooms, where patients can have the benefit of the

ELECTRO CHEMICAL BATHS,

Dr. Greene has also discovered a process by which he can with the solvent properties of certain salts, MEDICATE each bath to suit the constitution and disease of any patient and remove the various kinds of diseases upon the same principle which the Electro Chemical Baths removes mercury or other minerals.

This is the greatest triumph ever obtained in MEDICAL ELECTRICITY, and offers new facilities for purifying the blood from all humors, and removing

Cancers, Tumors, &c.

Dr. Greene may be consulted personally, or by letter, free from charge. Circulars sent free upon request. All letters should enclose a postage stamp, and be directed "Dr. R. Greene, 36 Broomfield Street, Boston."

Indian Medical Society.

At a meeting of this Society, held in Boston, Oct. 1st, 1856, the following officers were chosen:

Rev. Norris Day, Boston, President.

Reuben Greene, M. D. Boston, Vice President.

John Styles, Esq., Boston, Secretary.

W. M. Tyler, Esq., Boston, Treasurer.

The following resolutions among others, were adopted:—

Resolved—That in associating ourselves together, to extend and perpetuate the Indian System of Medicine, we are confering a favor upon the afflicted and advancing the cause of true Medical Science.

Resolved—That we have had a singular demonstration that Dr. Greene's treatment has cured hundreds of cases of Cancers after they were acknowledged incurable by other Physicians, and the fruits of his Practice for the last ten years conclusively prove that his treatment is a cure of the blood, and various other diseases which have found no remedy in the labyrinth of the old systems of medicine, are permanently cured by a judicious use of Nature's remedies in scientific and skillful hands.

Resolved—That we will not countenance ignorant pretenders or Quackery in any form, or receive as Physicians into this Association any persons who have not been successful in curing cases of Cancers, Scrofula, Humors, &c., by the Indian System.

The Mysteries of Life.

BY RICHARD HOWITT.

Mysterious oft it seems to me,
How I a being came to be,
Since, through the myriad years gone by,
Some rose and set, yet lived not I.

Streams flowed, birds sang, the earth, the sea,
Were in their motions fixed or free;
Each part or portion of a whole—
Yet I was not a living soul.

Of countless millions that have been,
No record lives or traces is seen;
Yet earth is green, the heavens are blue,
As they with earth had ought to do.

And now I live, and breathe, and move—
Life with its wondrous powers to prove;
Awake to knowledge of things past,
In life—a life not long to last.

All natures, since the world began,
Are subject to the mind of man;
Knowledge in insect, flower, and stone—
I learn all natures but my own.

The undiscovered, undefined,
In regions of the heart and mind;
Where wings of thought have never soared,
Realms by the poet unexplored.

Revolving these—to ear, heart, eye,
Mysterious seems it man should see;
So like a god in soul supreme,
But evanescent as a dream.

Days, years, pass on, and I am not—
Like myriads heretofore forgot;
A speck of life, a mould of earth,
Extinct as I had never birth.

A leaf, now green, now dark, now aere,
A drop of dew, a human tear;
A wandering wind that moans, then sleeps;
A rain-drop in the boundless deep.

Ages in light sweet flowers will blow
Above, whilst I am dust below;
And "joy and beauty hand in hand,"
Make Eden of the living land.

O, God! and wilt thou never more,
This life, resumed, again restore?
Can that which knows there is a God,
Again be nothing but a clod?

Great Animator of this dust!
O, breathe in me sublimer trust
Than that which, grovelling, seeks to steep
This ending life in endless sleep?

My bed in dust, and deepest night,
Thy word can fill with heavenly light;
And make the flowers above my grave,
With a triumph beauty wave.

Thy word can make heaven's bow, to span
With radiant arch the grave of man;
Can fill with promise bright the void—
'The doubt, the dread, to be destroyed.

This flesh may crumble, and this bone
In dust on wild winds be thrown;
But at thy call shall wing its way—
Death shall be life, and darkness day.

'Tis all one to me.

FROM THE GERMAN.

Oh, 'tis all one to me, all one,
Whether I've money or whether I've none.

He who has money can buy him a wife,
And he who has none can be free for life.

He who has money can trade if he choose,
And he who has none has nothing to lose.

He who has money has care not a few,
And he who has none can "sleep the night thro'."

He who has money can squint at the fair,
He who has none escapes much care.

He who has money can go to the play,
And he who has none at home can stay.

He who has money can travel about,
And he who has none can go without.

He who has money can be coarse as he will,
And he who has none can be coarser still.

He who has money can eat oyster meat,
And he who has none the shells can eat.

He who has money can drink foreign wine,
And he who has none with the goat will pine.

He who has money the cash must pay,
And he who has none says: "Charge it, pray!"

He who has money keeps a dog if he please,
And he who has none is not troubled with fleas.

He who has money must die one day,
And he who has none must go the same way.

Anecdotes.

A widower, having three children, married a widow with a like complement of olive branches, and after the expiration of six years, they further added to the "consolidation" family three more of their own-making in all nine. When one of "the tautest nine" would be overheard making a noise in the house, it was no uncommon thing for the husband to say—

That's yours Mrs. A.—
Presently another cry would be heard, when the wife would retort by exclaiming—
That's yours Mr. A.—

A third young urchin would then give tongue, when Mr. and Mrs. A.— would exclaim with one voice—That's ours.

An Irishman gentleman hearing of a friend having a stone coffin made for himself, exclaimed,

By the bowen, an' that's a good idee! Shure, an' a stone coffin 'ud last a man his lifetime!

A gentleman asked a little girl what it was that made a person feel so when another tickled him. I suppose it is the laugh creeping over him, was the instant reply.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, November 22d, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

THANKSGIVING. This time-honored custom of our Puritan forefathers, we hope to see observed in a spirit and manner worthy of the occasion. We have much to be thankful for! As a nation, young, but free,—we are the envy of the world. Our lot has been cast upon the most favored spot under the canopy of heaven, separated from the conflicting interests of the Old World,—on a continent of our own,—with a soil and climate adapted to all the varied productions of nature,—and with mineral wealth unsurpassed by that of any other clime, we have, within us riches, which, with the indomitable energy of our people, if properly developed, will raise us to the highest pinnacle of national greatness. Let us then, in view of those blessings, forget the petty strifes of the hour—discard from us as unworthy all sectional feelings, or prejudices arising from either birth or religion, remembering, that as members of the great American family, we should not as a unit, and resolve, that whatever may have been our past differences, that in future, we will have but one object, one aim,—the common good, of our common country. In this spirit let us approach the throne of grace, and our offerings be sanctified by the blessings of the children of want and oppression.

REPRESENTATIVES ELECTED. The following gentlemen have been chosen Representatives to the next General Court from the several towns in Norfolk County:—

Bellingham—Martin Rockwood, Fremont.
Brenton—J. G. Howard, Fremont.
Brookline—Abijah W. Goddard, Fremont.

RATHER FELL. Dedham Jail now contains twenty-seven inmates. Bancroft the negro, who murdered Sweetser, at Jamaica Plains, is among them. It is stated that he is kept in close confinement and complains of the want of sufficient exercise. As he cannot read, he passes his time in pacing the narrow limits of his cell, and reflecting upon the great error of his life. He seems deeply penitent, and indulges the hope that he may escape the dread sentence of the law.

THE EXHIBITION. The Universalist Sabbath School held their annual Exhibition on the 14th inst. Although the evening was dark and rainy, there were about four hundred persons present. The exercises, which consisted of single-pieces, dialogues, songs, &c., were performed in a very prompt and pleasing manner, giving perfect satisfaction to the audience, if we could judge from their smiling faces.

Thanksgiving Ball.

GRAND MILITARY AND CIVIC DEMONSTRATION. The Military and Civic portions of our community, have cordially united, for the purpose of rendering a suitable homage, and closing the festivities of that day, in a social ball at the Hancock House. The services of "mine host," A. Webb Esq.—the prince of managers in such matters—have been actively employed for some days past, in making the necessary arrangements. The large and commodious Hall of the "Old Hancock," has been tastefully and appropriately decorated. A band of unrivalled musicians has been secured, to enliven the occasion, and discourse sweet music to those who join in the "Gay and giddy dance."

From the notes of preparation which have reached us, we are assured, that it will be one of the most joyous and social gatherings of the season,—every way worthy of the day, and deservedly meriting the patronage of the pleasure seeking citizens of old time-honored Quincy.

We trust that a pleasant and happy time awaits them.

For particulars see programme in another column.

SIGNS OF WINTER. The first snow of the season fell on Saturday morning last, in small quantities, which speedily disappeared from the streets.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS. All the present Members of Congress from this State are re-elected, with the exceptions of Dr. Witt in the ninth District, who is superseded by Eli Thayer, the originator of the Emigrant Aid Society, and Trafton in the eleventh District, who was defeated by Henry L. Dawes of Adams, an able man and formerly a Whig.

COURT AT DEDHAM. The Supreme Judicial Court for Norfolk County, stands adjourned to Dec. 2d instead of Dec. 3d, as has been stated. The trial of Bancroft, for murder, will then occupy the attention of the Court and Jury.

THE MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE. Twenty-seven R-republicans and thirteen Fremonts have been elected to the Senate. In the House, three hundred and thirty Republicans and Fremont Americans, and twenty-one Opposition, have been elected.

For the Patriot.

Indignation.

MR. EDITOR: We understand that the honorable and select portion of the Fremont party of this town, and those who had received office, met at their head quarters last week to congratulate upon their recent victories in Massachusetts, and enjoy the bounteous repast of a well-spread table; which conviviality was interspersed by speeches and sentiments until the "witching time of night." But where were the rank and file? those who had spent days and nights in organizing the party, and ransacking every nook and corner of the town to procure voters? Echo answers where! The coarse attire, and the smell of the shop, of the hardy mechanic, and industrious laborer, did not comport with their sense of taste, and was obnoxious to their olfactory. Their sympathies are not with the white population, but with a race of a darker hue, whose heads are adorned with more crispy appendage. The next time they call for our assistance, we shall let them know where we are. These are the sentiments of one of the

For the Patriot.

That Supper.

MR. EDITOR: We have heard frequent inquiries made, from certain of the rank and file of the Fremont party, who do good service in the cause, why the banquet which our newly elected Representatives recently provided for the entertainment of their friends, was made so exclusive? The reason to us, who are acquainted with many of the traits peculiar to the character of the party, was plain and obvious. They have always held a strong antipathy to every thing that was plebeian. With their high aristocratic notions, no violence was done to their feelings in courting the society of a negro, or sitting as listening listeners to the pearls of wisdom which fell from his ebony lips. But such a condescension to a mechanic or laboring man, by them, would never be countenanced. They abhor, or profess to, every thing which smells of the workshop. They repulse their occupants to a respectful distance, lest too close an intimacy should destroy the influence which they hold over them; for from the fruits of their labor, they draw their livelihood. Are our politicians so verdant as to suppose that these shriekers of freedom are so lost to the true dignity of their character as to descend to the level of workmen—to join them at the festive board? The idea is preposterous. They have yet to learn that a white man who works for a living is in their estimation as good as a negro.

A SHRIEKER.

Poetry.

Home and Friends.

Oh, there's power to make each hour
As sweet as heaven designed it;
Nor need we sigh to bring it home,
Though few there be who find it.
We seek too high for things close by,
And lose what nature found us;
For life has here no charms so dear
As home and friends around us.

We oft destroy the present joy
For future hopes and praise them,
While flowers as sweet bloom at our feet,
If we'd but stoop to raise them;
For things afar still sweeter are,
When youth's bright spell has bound us;
But soon we're taught that earth has naught
Like home and friends around us.

A Pretty Thought.

The night is mother of the day,
The winter of the spring;
And ever upon old decay,
The greenest mosses cling.

Autumn.

Sweet Sabbath of the year,
While evening steps decay,
Thy parting steps methinks I hear,
Steal from the world away.
Amid thy silent flowers
"Tis sad, but sweet, to dwell,
Where falling leaves and drooping flowers,
Around me breathe farewell.
Along thy sunset slues
Their glories melt in shade,
And like the fondly prize,
Seem lovelier as they fade.
A deep and crimson streak
The dying leaves disclose;
As, on Consumption's waning cheek,
Mid ruin, blooms the rose.
Thy scene each vision brings
Of beauty in decay;
Of fair and early faded things,
Too exquisite to stay;
Of joy that came no more;
Of flowers whose bloom is fled;
Of farewells wept upon the shore;
Of friends estranged or dead;
Of all that now may seem,
To memory's tearful eye,
The vanished beauty of a dream,
O'er which we gaze and sigh.

The Door-Knocker.

I have loudly knocked at the House of Wealth:
One penny dropped from the window by stealth.
I have knocked, too, right earnest, at love's Door;
Alas! there stood knocking some fifty more.
I dared to stop at the Castle of Fame,
But only to mounted Knights answer came.
I also sought out the Laborer's Thatch;
But the cries of woe made me drop the latch.
I thought in the House of content to hide;
But no one could show me it, far nor wide.
There is but one more mansion, small and still;
And now at its dark portal, knock I will.
It already shelters many a guest;
Yet to many more will the Grave give Rest!

The Last Dahlia.

Oh Lady fair with the golden hair,
This floral tribute take;
Its gorgeous leaves, these autumn eves,
All summer's memories wake.
'Tis the latest bloom above the tomb
Where sister flowers rest;
Ere the coming storm shall crush its form,
Let it shine upon thy breast.

There's a drop of dew on its rich bright hue,
Like a tear on beauty's face,
But 'neath thy smile it may bloom awhile
In more than native grace.
Oh, a farrow gleam of the sun's last beam
To late blown flowers seems given;
A parting ray as they pass away,
Like the lingering smile of Heaven.

Anecdotes.

During the stormy days of 1848, four stalwart mobocrats entered the bank of the late Baron Asselme de Rothschild, at Frankfurt. You have million on millions, said they to him, and we have nothing; you must divide with us.

Very well, what do you suppose the firm of de Rothschild is worth?
About forty millions of florins.
Forty millions you think, eh? Now there are forty millions of people in Germany; that will be a florin apiece. Here's yours.

A quaint old gentleman, of an active, stirring disposition, had a man at work in his garden who was quite the reverse:
Mr. Jones, said he, did you ever see a snail?
Certainly, said Jones.
Then, said the old gentleman, you must have met him, you never could overtake one.

You have only yourself to please, said a married friend to an old bachelor.
True, replied he, but you cannot tell what a difficult task I find it.

BRIDGEWATER PAINT.
For Wood, Brick and Iron Buildings, Steam and Canal Boats Railroad Cars, &c., &c.
Or, for all kinds of work above and under water. Perfectly spark and cinder Proof on roofs of Houses, Decks of Steamers, Railroad and other Bridges.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24th, 1856.
WE have examined this Paint chemically and pronounced it to be one of those pigments that form a chemical unity with Linseed Oil; that is, the oil and the pigment unite and form a durable compound.

This is not the case with many pigments now in use; because their duration, when exposed to moisture, light and heat.

For example paints manufactured from metallic basis (the direct oxide of copper excepted) are not durable because they only mix mechanically with oil.

But all mineral paints constructed chemically as the Bridgewater pigment, are permanent, because there is an affinity between them and the oil in which they are mixed.

The durability of a paint, therefore depends upon the nature and purity of its parts, in being so related to each other, that they have an affinity in themselves, and being negative to the oil in which they are mixed.

The analysis of the Bridgewater Paint is proof of such a condition; then as we have said before, it is a point to be depended upon for its durability.

These facts are based upon experiment and practical experience, not of a few days only, but upon experience of hard study and hard labor for the past thirty-six years.

Lastly, the universal satisfaction given by the Bridgewater Paint, to those who use it, is good proof of what we have herein stated.

Respectfully submitted,
(Signed),

Indian

MEDICAL INSTITUTION.

Office 36 Broomfield Street, Boston.

ESTABLISHED by Dr. R. Greene, and his associates, for the successful and scientific treatment of Cancers, Scrophulous, Humors and all kinds of diseases, upon the Natural or Indian system of Medicine.

This Institution has now a large MEDICAL

Office and LABORATORY at 36 Broomfield

Street, and several boarding houses for the accommodation of patients from abroad. A newspaper has been established for the purpose of this system of practice. It is entitled "Nature's Advocate," or the "Scientific Indian Physician." It is published monthly for fifty cents a year.

There are also connected with this Institution,

Bathing Rooms, where patients can have the benefit of the

ELECTRO CHEMICAL BATHS,

Dr. Greene has also discovered a process by which he can with the most perfect certainty constitute and disease of any patient and remove the various kinds of diseases upon the same principle, as the Electro-Chemical Baths removes mercury or other minerals.

This is the greatest triumph ever obtained in

MEDICAL ELECTRICITY,

and offers new facilities for purifying the blood from all humors, and removing

Cancers, Tumors, &c.

Dr. Greene may be consulted personally, or by letter, free from charge. Circulars sent free when requested. All letters should enclose a postage stamp, and be directed "Dr. R. Greene, 36 Broomfield street, Boston."

Indian Medical Society.

At a meeting of this Society, held in Boston,

Oct. 1st, 1856, the following officers were chosen:

Rev. Norris Day, Boston, President.

Reuben C. Green, M. D. Boston, Vice President.

John Styles, Esq. Boston, Secretary.

W. M. Tyler, Esq. Boston, Treasurer.

The following resolutions among others, were adopted:—That in associating ourselves together, to extend and perpetuate the Indian System of Practice upon Scientific Principles, we are convinced that we are doing good to the afflicted and advancing the cause of true Medical Science.

Resolved:—That we have had ocular demonstration that Dr. Greene's treatment has cured hundreds of cases of Cancers after they were acknowledged incurable by other Physicians, and the fruits of this practice for the last ten years conclusively prove that Cancer, Scrophulous,

Humors, the blood, and various other diseases, which have hitherto been regarded as incurable, are systems of medicine, are permanently cured by a permanent use of Nature's remedies in scientific and skillful hands.

Resolved:—That we will not countenance any practice or quackery in any form, or receive as a member into this Association any person who has not received a Medical Education,

JOHN STYLES, Esq. Secretary.

AMEN: PRIVATE MEDICAL GUIDE.

New York City, FREEMAN HUNT
Brooklyn, (N. Y.) GERSHON DREW.

A band of robbers had secretly entered a provincial town in France, several houses had been plundered, sideboards of plate untied, and desks forced open. The robbers had played their part with so much skill and success, that they had in every case escaped detection. They directed their attacks to the houses of the most wealthy, and chose the most favorable hours for the execution of their plans, first entering those houses when inhabitants retired early to rest, and afterwards those in which later hours were kept. It was evident that they were well informed, well directed, and that facility was given them to enter and to leave the town by windows or roofs of some houses on the ramparts, where traces of them had been discovered.

One of those houses was inhabited by a man named Benoit, on whom suspicion strongly fell; for he had but lately come to live in the town, and was very little known. Besides this, he had a gloomy expression of countenance which repelled people; his brows were dark and closely knit, and he had a long scar across his face. He scarcely ever spoke, even to his wife, to whom he was otherwise a kind husband; though it must be confessed that his taciturnity and his dislike of repeating the same thing twice, inspired her with awe, so that the gossip of the neighborhood greatly prized Madame Benoit. He never bestirred his son Silvester, but he did not allow him to be disobedient or to argue; and though he was but seven years old he made him work; and the little boy who saw Silvester run off to his work when he saw his father coming, was afraid of him and called him "wicked Benoit." Finally, it was known that Benoit had followed various callings; that he had been a soldier, that he had seen a great deal of the world, and must consequently have met with many adventures; but as he never related any stories, it was concluded that he could have nothing good to relate. From the time that suspicion fell on him, every little incident was collected that could tend to confirm it. He had never been in the habit of frequenting public houses, and it was remarked that he had been at one day preceding the robbery; that he was drinking and conversing familiarly with two ill-looking men, who did not belong to the town, and who had not been seen since. A neighbor declared that having gone to the window at eleven of the clock on the night of the robbery, Benoit's door which was usually shut at nine of the clock, was half open, though there was no light in the shop.

At length they proceeded to examine the place by which it was suspected the robbers had entered, and where a silver spoon, supposed to have been stolen by them, had been picked up. It was exactly opposite a garret window in Benoit's house; they perceived also a bit of cord hanging from the window, which had probably served to fasten a ladder, they even discovered the marks of the ladder, and the print of men's feet under the window.

From all these circumstances, Benoit was apprehended and put in prison. He suffered himself to be conducted there with the greatest composure, for he felt he was innocent. The occurrences which led to his apprehension were as follows: An old soldier named Trappe, a comrade of Benoit's, had lately come and established himself as a hair-dresser in the town. He had on one occasion saved the life of Benoit when solely pressed by the enemy, so that Benoit received him kindly, though he disliked his character, and considered him a boasting liar if not a rogue.

Poetry.

The Snowdrifts.

As fast the snowy shower fell noiseless
O'er the hard and frozen ground,
And shrouded every pine and fir tree
With an ermine mantle round;
My little cherub boy was sporting
On the carpet at my feet,
With the light music of his prattle
Chiming in my ear so sweet.

But I called him from his gambols,
Bade him let his playthings lie,
That he might see the soft-winged strangers,
Floating downward from the sky.
And as we stood beside the window,
He kissed a welcome to the snow-flakes,
With his tiny hand so fair.

And often gazed he through the window,
When high heaped the snow-drifts lay,
And tried to tell me how they glistened,
In his little childish way.
Yet often longed I for the spring-time
With its verdure fresh and fair,
And for the golden days of summer,
Flowery fields and perfumed air.

For many pleasant scenes I fancied,
Saw with all a parent's joy,
Along the walks and green grass sporting,
The darling image of my boy;
But when the snow-drifts all had vanished,
And the spring-time fresh appeared,
O, instead of joy came sorrow,
Crushed were all the hopes I reared.

And on this golden day of summer,
With its soft and perfumed air,
Again I stand beside the window,
Close beside a vacant chair;
I see the walks and green grass verdure
Again to the breeze mild;
But oh! my heart is sad and lonely,
Where is now my cherub child?

I listen, but no footsteps patter;
Gone the playthings from the floor;
All is silent, for his prattle
Ne'er will chime its note more.
For when again the snow-shower falling,
Yonder walks with down shall pave,
The glistening snow-drift then will gather
O'er my little cherub's grave!

The Song of the Bank.

Work, work, work!
And stand at the desk all day;
Work, work, work!
And bid an adieu to all play.
Work, and be constantly driven;
Wear the flesh from your bones and your face
The outsiders think banking is heaven,
But it's more like the opposite place.

Count, count, and write!
Count, money all day long;
And on taking your balance at night
Have your cash come provokingly wrong.
Then look till you're nervous and cross,
And hunt till you're almost faint;
You must charge it to "profit and loss,"
And at last find it on the Cashier.

Post, and compare, and post!
Post, and compare, and check!
And work till you're almost
Of your former self a wreck.
Post, and check, and compare!
Check, and compare, and foot,
Till you're driven almost to despair
By the work which upon you is put.

Lodger, and Journal, and Cash,
And Blotter and Register too,
And the whole of that blue-edged trash
Which it takes so long to write through;
I wish they could all be turned back
To rage, real dirty and vain,
And be stuffed down the mouth of that jack-
Ass who first invented a Bank!

Sign, sign, sign!
In nervous agony writhe,
Till you're forced at length to resign
By that bony old chap with a scythe.
Would you be a good banker? then work,
And cannot neither error nor fault;
Spend your days at a desk like a clerk,
And be laid after death in a vault.

Work, work, work!
And stand at the desk all day;
Work, work, work!
And bid an adieu to all play.
Work, and be constantly driven;
Wear the flesh from your bones and your face;
The outsiders think banking is heaven,
But it's more like the opposite place!

Dead Leaves.

The day is dead, and in its grave;
The flowers are fast asleep;
But in this solemn wood alone,
My nightly watch I keep.
The night is dark, the dew descends;
But dew and darkness are my friends

I stir the dead leaves under foot,
And breathe the earthy smell;
It is the odor of decay,
And yet I like it well.
Give others day and scented flowers,
Give me dead leaves and midnight hours!

Anecdotes.

I stand, said a western stump orator, on the broad platform of the principles of '98, and palsied by my arm if I desert 'em!

You stand on nothing of the kind! interrupted a little shoemaker in the crowd; you stand in my boots, that you never paid me for, and I want the money.

In a tavern, in a small town, sat a farmer, who was plagued and bantered by over a dozen guests, who were present.

Well, said the farmer at last, I've got the best of all of you.

How so? asked all.

In me, you have only got one fool, while in you, I have got over a dozen.

A little girl describes a snake, as a thing that's a tail all the way up to his head.

A California lover writes to his sweetheart, thus:—Loving yeres is rather long to host a gal, but I'll lay you yit, Sus.

over its surface, and now it fans the lounge with the big branches of the chestnut above his head.

It is not always, however, that it appears as master of the revels. In the character of avenger, it now and then rushes upon the stage and makes its audience tremble. Wide forests are instantly laid low by its irresistible yet viewless arm; dwellings are torn asunder and crashed beneath its weight; men and animals are lifted up and whirled about like snow flakes in a winter's storm. So it is on the land.

At sea its power is terrific. The ocean is rolled into mountains. Earth and the heavens meet and mingle together in night and chaos. The elements put forth their voices, but above all their horrible thunder the wind rides triumphant and utters its trumpet summons to the universal roar of battle. It rages, it screams, and it shrieks. Over all other sounds the blast of the invisible is heard: and that power which is the cause of the boiling of the deep, the agony of the cracking ship, yet is itself forever unseen. — Newark Daily Advertiser.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, December 6th, 1856.

"BORN TO MASTER, OR TO SUFFER WE."

THE WEATHER for the past few days has been quite wintry. On Saturday, of last week, the first snow of the season fell, and our streets, in consequence, were made lively by the merry jingling of sleigh bells. Winter is now fairly upon us. That horrid despot of the North has us fast in his chains. But out of our abundance, much may be done at the social hearth, and in the domestic circle, to mitigate the rigors of his reign.

UNIVERSALIST FESTIVAL. It will be seen by reference to another column that the Universalist Society of Milton, propose holding their Annual Levee or Social Festival, at the Town Hall, in this place, on Wednesday evening next. From the preparations which have been announced, and the general invitation extended, together with the host of friends attached to that order, we predict that a crowd of admirers will be attracted to this "Universal Banquet."

THE DEMOCRATIC FESTIVAL which came off at Faneuil Hall on Wednesday evening last, in commemoration of their late victory, was certainly a brilliant affair. From the notes of preparation which reached us, we were induced to leave our rural retirement, through fog and rain, to witness this social gathering of the Democracy. And we must say, that we were amply paid for our trouble.

The Hall was tastefully and appropriately decorated with flags and other emblems, the windows, galleries, borders and rostrum were festooned with the national colors—and Tablets with suitable notices enriched the entire fronts of the second story. The lower and upper floors were filled with tables, at which near one thousand guests sat down to a bounteous repast, served up by that prince of caterers, Henry C. Amers, Esq. We noticed quite a number of veteran Democrats, delegates from Quincy, at the "Festive Board," who entered vigorously into the spirit of the occasion, and with a zeal which did honor to themselves and credit to their constituents.

The best of feeling prevailed—enlivened at times by patriotic toasts, and argumentative Addresses delivered by eminent speakers. A band of most excellent musicians were in attendance, who, in fine style, discoursed some of our most popular national airs, which sent the quick blood coursing through the veins, and drew forth the plaudits of the audience with deafening effect. The company broke up at a late hour, well pleased with the evening's entertainment, and with the firm resolve to renew it again in 1860.

KANSAS MATTERS. A letter to the St. Louis Democrat, of the 25 ult., says that the militia under Col. Titus, will soon be disbanded by Gov. Geary.

Gov. Geary has quietly submitted to the action of Judge Leconte, in issuing a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Hayes.

It is reported that Col. Titus, with one hundred men, will shortly leave the Territory for Nicaragua.

The President fully endorses the course of Gov. Geary, in Kansas, especially in the Leconte affair.

On the 18th of November, Gov. Geary was publicly received at Leavenworth, Kansas territory, and welcomed by the mayor. His reply was in an excellent vein, and was loudly applauded. He said that he would co-operate with the citizens of the territory in making Kansas too hot for bandits and robbers, and in affording full protection for life, liberty and property.

BRUTAL. William Allen, at Flanagan's yard, Baltimore, last Saturday, fired into a group of little girls, who were picking up scraps of copper about a ship. Three or four of them received shots in their bodies. One was shot in the back of the neck, and the blood streamed from the wound.

The President's Message

Congress. The last Session of the Thirty-fourth Congress assembled at Washington on Monday last. On Tuesday, the President's Message was laid before them, and almost immediately on its reception was distributed far and wide throughout the entire country.

The Message after making general reference to Constitutional obligations in communicating important matters to Congress in relation to the state of the nation, and to recommend such measures as may tend to advance the interests of the whole country, proceeds to refer to the late Presidential election, as affording evidence of the sentiment of condemnation which the sovereign people entertain in relation to the formation of an intolerant and geographical parties. He also alludes to the assaults of those parties upon the Constitution, and to the fact that the reaction upon these aggressions serves, at times to raise up new barriers for its defence and security. The repeal of the Missouri Compromise—the question of the rights of all in a territory, while it remains in a territorial condition, are descended upon, and authorities quoted to sustain the repeal of the Compromise, and the sovereignty of the people everywhere—in the Territories as well as in the States. The President reviews the main points of the opposition to the repeal of the Missouri line, and raises Constitutional arguments justifying that repeal. The argument that by introducing the experiment of leaving men to judge for themselves what institutions will best suit them, is aiming to extend slave labor into all new territories of the United States, is pronounced utterly destitute of any justification in the nature of things, and contrary to all the fundamental doctrines and principles of civil liberty and self-government.

He congratulates the country upon the restoration of peace in the Territory of Kansas, and that it has been accomplished without shedding one drop of blood by the forces of the United States.

The President proceeds to expose the fallacy of the idea, that it was the duty of the Executive to see to the regularity of the local elections in Kansas; and clearly shows that he has no more power to interfere in the elections in the Territories than he has in the States.

He concludes this part of his communication to Congress by trusting that the proper authorities will see that no act violative of the provisions of the Constitution remain on the statute book of Kansas, and that all necessary steps will be taken to assure to the inhabitants of the Territory the enjoyment of all the constitutional rights of citizens of the United States, as contemplated by the organic act of the Territory.

The President's exposition of the financial condition of the country will gratify every citizen. The total receipts into the Treasury the past year, were $73,918,141—which with balance on hand, July 1, 1855, made the total resources of the year amount to $92,550,117. The expenditures, including sums paid on the public debt, ($12,776,390), amounted to $72,968,702. Since the 4th of March, 1855, $45,525,319 of the public debt, including premium, has been discharged, and the balance about $31,000,000 could have been liquidated within the year, but government could not press payment upon it.

From other portions of the Message we are informed that we are at peace with all nations—that the country is in every branch of its industry in a sound and prosperous condition. The Document, as a State Paper, we think, will amply pay a perusal.

Meeting of the Electoral College.

The electors of President and Vice President are required by law to meet at the capitol, the day preceding the first Wednesday in December, and those who may be assembled at 4 P. M. the statute says, shall "immediately after that hour proceed to fill, by ballot and plurality of votes, all vacancies in the electoral college, occasioned by the death, refusal to serve, or neglect to attend at that hour, of any elector."

The electoral college being thus completed, they are then to choose a president and secretary from their own body. This will complete the duties of Tuesday.

The secretary of state must, on or before Wednesday, deliver to the president of the electoral college three lists of names of the electors, certified by the governor under the seal of the state.

On Wednesday the electors will again convene at the capitol, and vote by separate ballots for President and Vice President. One of the persons voted for must not reside in the same state with the electors. The electors are to make separate lists of the ballots for President and Vice President, and seal them up, endorsing thereon their certificate of the contents. These lists are to be delivered to the president of the Senate at Washington before the first Wednesday of January, by the messenger to be appointed by the electors. They are also to make two additional lists, one of which they are required to send by mail to the president of the Senate, and the other they are to deliver to the United States Judge for the district.

This will complete the duties of the electors, except that of drawing their pay, which is the same for travel and attendance as that of members of the legislature.

CALIFORNIA RETURNS. From the imperfect returns of the California election brought by the last steamer the Providence Post collates a table of 21 counties giving

Buchanan	23,454
Fillmore	16,000
Fremont	10,447

Mr. Buchanan's majority over Fillmore, thus far is 7454—over Fremont 13,007. Full returns will undoubtedly increase Mr. Buchanan's plurality in these counties, whatever may be the result in others.

For the Patriot.

A little more of that Supper.

MR. EDITOR: The afflicted and wounded, by the timely and proper remarks on the official Fremont Banquet, in the Patriot of the 22d ult., are trying hard to make out of this complaint came from the Democrats, this is a mistake; if the individuals so afflicted will investigate the subject, they will find that the whole matter originated and originated from their own friends, and that the disaffection in the party is more general than they imagine, and well they might. Those who were excluded from this festival supposed they were working with their equals—for "Freemen and Freedom—not for taskmasters, who, when they had received office at their hands were ashamed to sit at the same festive board. When those who had spent their time and money, and who had been sent as delegates to their Convention, and superintended the arrangements for the torch light procession, made enquiry why they were denied the privilege of enjoying the pleasure of this conviviality, were told that they did not know them. "This was the unkindest cut of all." And

"If there be a crime Of deeper die than all the guilty train Of human vices, 'tis ingratitude."

We have seen, (as well as many others,) a great many similar cases of ingratitude by aristocratic politicians; and I will cite one very familiar instance: We have observed the honorables just before the day of election, meeting the plebeian by the road-side, and shake the cordial hand, and in a very affable and polite manner, enquire after their personal interest, saying if they require any assistance to call on them, but when the battle is over and the smoke has cleared away, they pass them by as a dog in the street. When will such people learn to shun such shallow political trickery? We hope the individuals in question may learn wisdom, and the next time they attempt any thing of the kind, they will endeavor to treat their constituents with proper respect, and if they have not generosity enough to get up a banquet in a proper manner not to have any at all.

In May, 1821, Mr. Curtis was elected, with the late Edward Miller, Esq., to represent this town in the General Court; and in 1828, was chosen Town Treasurer, which office he filled very acceptably for many years.

Miscellaneous.

The Last Sixpence.

It was on a chill, bleak morning in November, that Charles Aubrey emerged from an old shed where he had spent the last part of the night under a pile of sheepskins. He was a young man, not over two and twenty, and yet retained great beauty of person, though his clothes were torn and dirty, and his face pale and haggard. Only one year before he had been left orphan with eleven thousand dollars in money in his possession.

He had always been a generous-hearted, frank and loving companion; but evil associations had gathered about him, and in an unfortunate hour, he gave himself up to their influence. He thought not of the value of money; and designing knaves, under the guise of friendship, could always draw it from him. But the poor misguided youth had run the race and was now alone. His money was gone and his sunshine companions had left him. He had reached the goal towards which for a whole year he had been striving.

As young Aubrey stood there now, his lips were parched and his limbs shook as though with a palsy. He mechanically placed his hand in his pocket and took therefrom a sixpence. He searched further—felt in every pocket—but he could find no more. That single sixpence was the last of his fortune.

Al, Charles, Charley, he murmured to himself, you've run the race. Where now are the friends who so long hung about you? One poor sixpence! It will buy me one glass of grog to allay my burning thirst. O, would to God it would buy me one true friend!

He spoke thus, and with the words came rushing through his mind the memory of the past. He remembered his mother as she held him the last time to her bosom and blessed him, and he remembered when he saw them cover her body up in the warm flowery summer, not many years ago. He remembered his kind, good father, and how that father had loved him and blessed him with his last breath. And he remembered one other, a bright-eyed joyous girl in whose keeping he had once placed all his love, and his hopes of joy. But it was gone now.

Thus he stood, with the small coin in his hand, when he heard footsteps approaching. He raised his eyes, and beheld an old woman with bended back, who came tottering on, slowly and trembling. Her garments were torn and tattered, and the thin grey hair hung matted and uncombed. She stopped when she came where the youth stood and leaned heavily upon her staff.

Charity, good sir? she uttered in hoarse, tremulous tones. Give wherewith to purchase a single meal, and I'll ask God to bless thee.

By this life, good woman, you are the very one I have been wishing for. Here—it is all I have—it is my last sixpence! Take it. I have only wished that it could buy me one true friend.

The old woman hesitated. Will you take it? asked Charles, earnestly. Take it, so that I may feel that I have one friend.

I need it, sir, the woman said, but I dare not take it from you, for you would not profit by my friendship.

Yes I would. It would send a ray of sunshine through my soul to know that one human being blessed me.

But what good could come of that while you continued to curse yourself?

The youth started but he spoke not. If you will have me as a friend, will you listen to me as a friend.

Listen! Yes. Then let this be your lowest value of life, said the woman, with solemnity. Turn now and go up hill. Go up once more. I knew your mother, Charley Aubrey, and I remember how kind she was; O, did she ever think her well beloved son would sink so low?

Stop! stop! groaned the unhappy youth. O, who shall give me the first lift to regain all I have lost?

I will. You? Who are you? You say you knew my mother. Who are you?

Never mind. Suffice it for you to know that I have suffered as deeply as you ever did.

I know what it is to suffer. I say I can give you the first lift. I mean by that, I can show you the way. Follow my counsel, and you may yet recover all that you have lost.

No, no, not that. O, there is one less I can never make up!

And as he spoke he bowed his head and covered his face with his hands. Let not such feelings be with you now.—First resolve that you will turn from the evil that has brought you down. You know what it is as well as I do.

Can you do this? But I had done it ere you came up. Then take the next step. Go and make a friend who can help you farther. Go to Amos Williams and—

No, no, not there. O, not there, interrupted Charles.

Go to his store and freely confess to him all your faults, resumed the woman, without seeming to notice the interruption. Tell him all, and then ask him to trust you once more.

No, no, I dare not go to him. But listen! I heard Mr. Williams say himself, with his own lips, that he would give you his hand if you would only help yourself.

Did he say that? uttered Charles eagerly. He did. And now Charles Aubrey, be assured that you have not lost everything. Let people know that you mean to rise and be a man and all whose friendship is worth having will give you their hands. Go to Amos Williams's first.

I will go. Then give me the sixpence.

Amos Williams stood at the great desk in his counting room, and he was alone. While he thus stood casting up a column of figures upon a page of one of his ledgers, the door was opened and Charles Aubrey entered. He was wet pale and haggard, and looked as he did when he saw him two hours ago. The merchant started back with an utterance of pain and surprise as he recognized in the miserable form before him the once happy and beloved youth whom he had delighted to honor.

Charles, he uttered as soon as he could command his speech, why have you come here?

Mr. Williams, spoke the youth, in a choking voice, I have come to—tell you that my course is run, and from this moment I am a—

Here he stopped. He hesitated a moment, and then his feelings overcame him and bowing his head he burst into tears, and sobs loud and deep broke from his lips.

The merchant was deeply affected, and with the warm tears gathering thickly in his own eyes, he started forward and placed his hand upon the youth's head.

Charles, he uttered, in a tremulous, eager voice, have you resolved to be a man once more?

With God's help I will be a man again, was the youth's reply.

Is your money all gone?

Yes, sir. This morning I had one solitary sixpence left, and that I gave to a poor old woman who bade me to come here.

Ay, I know her. She is an unfortunate creature, and has suffered much. I bade her if she saw you, and you were cast down repentant, to send you here, for I heard yesterday that you were at the foot of the precipice. Now, if you are determined, you shall not want for help.

In eager, broken, sobbing sentences, Charles poured out his thanks, and stated the resolution he had taken.

And now, said Mr. Williams, after the matter had been talked over some time, we must find a place where you can recruit your strength a little before you try to work.

There is my brother who owns a farm out in M— He would be glad to have you come there awhile; and when you wholly recover your waste of strength you shall have a place here.

At first the youth refused to accept so much, for he knew his unworthiness; but the merchant simply answered him:

You can pay me for this if you choose, so you need not be delicate about it; and as for your unworthiness—when the lost ones of the earth are not worth redeeming, then some other standard of worth must be regarded than the simple one which Jesus of Nazareth gave to his followers.

So that was settled that Charles should go out into the country and remain awhile. He found Mr. Williams' brother, ready and happy to receive him, and there he soon began to regain his health and spirits.

In two weeks he was as strong as ever, and at the end of a month the marks of dissipation had all left his face. Then he returned to town and entered the store. Amos Williams gave him a lucrative station and bade him remember nothing of the past save the one great lesson he had learned.

Charles, he said, you know the widow Swan?

Yes, sir. Well, I have engaged board for you there. I hope the arrangement will suit you.

Yes, sir, returned the youth, with a strange emotion.

From that time Charles Aubrey went on nobly and truly in the path he had marked out. As soon as he began to appear in prosperity his old company flocked around him once more; but he repulsed them with a stern firmness that left them no hopes. Yes, for a month he was beset with temptations in every shape, but he hesitated not once. His mind was made up, and he made but one answer to all invitations to depart from the path of rectitude, and he was finally left to pursue his own course.

Little did Charles Aubrey know how closely he had been watched. Mr. Williams knew his every move next to his prayers, which he poured forth in the privacy of his own department. Thus passed away three months, and at the end of that time Mr. Williams called the young man into the counting room one evening, after the rest of the people had gone.

Well, Charles, the merchant commenced, how would you like to change your boarding place?

There was something in the look and tone of the man as he spoke these words that made the youth start. The blood rushed to his face, anon he turned pale.

If you would like, the merchant resumed in the same low, strange tone, you may come and board with me. I will not deceive you, Charles. Until I could be certain that you would entirely reform, I dared not carry you to my house. But I am satisfied now. I have not doubted you but I would prove you. And now, if you please you may inform Mrs. Swan that you shall board with her no more. She will not be disappointed for I have spoken with her on the subject.

With these words Mr. Williams left the store, and as soon as Charles could recover from the strange emotions that had almost overpowered him, he called for the porter to come and lock up, and then, having looked up the great safe, he took his departure.

On the next morning he came to the store, and when his employer came he informed him that he had given notice to Mrs. Swan.

Very well, returned the merchant. This evening, then you will go home with me.

Evening came, and Charles Aubrey accompanied his old friend home. Tea was ready the first of the family had eaten an hour before. After tea Charles was conducted to his sitting room, where lamps were burning, and where Mr. Williams informed him he could amuse himself by reading.

Charles sat down there, and his employer went out, but he could not read. His heart beat wildly in his bosom—his soul was strangely worked upon. O, how natural everything there appeared. And many happy, blissful hours he had spent in that same room. Thus he sat when the door slowly opened, and a female appeared within the apartment. She was a bright-eyed, beautiful maiden, and when she entered, a happy smile was upon her face. But the smile faded away, and her lips trembled. She tried to speak, but she could not. She only stood with her hands half extended gazing trembling upon the youth. In a moment more her eyes overran with tears and then Charles started up. He could doubt no more. Why else should he have been brought thither; why left thus? why placed on such probation? He hesitated no more. With one quick step he sprang forward, and without a word he caught the fair girl to his bosom.

Mary, he uttered as he gazed into the sparkling eyes of the fair being who still clung to him, 'you still love me—you forgive me all—and trust me once more?

Yes, she murmured; and ere she could speak further, her father entered the room.

Aha—so you've found him, have you, Mary? he cried, in a happy, joyous tone.

Mr. Williams, uttered Charles, still holding Mary by the hand, and speaking with difficulty, I hope I am not deceived. You have not brought me here to kill me! You cannot have pressed this cup to dash it away again.

Of course not, returned the merchant. But you must know the whole truth, and for fear my child may tell you all, I will tell you myself. This noble girl has never ceased to love you, and when you were the lowest down, she loved you the most. She came to me and asked me if she might save you if she could. I could not tell her nay, and she went to work. She has suffered much, and Charles it remains with you to say whether her future shall be one of happiness or not.

She knew that you were down, that your money was gone, and that your false friends had forsaken you. Then it was that her love grew bold and strong. She wondered if you would repulse her. She knew not what might be your feelings, and to save herself the pain of a direct repulse from you she assumed a disguise, so that she might approach you without being known, and yet gain some idea of your feelings, and to serve you if she could. I think she has done well. At any rate, she has regained you to yourself, and it must now be your own fault if the silken tie is loosed again.

With these words the father left the apartment.

You Mary? you in disguise? queried Charles, as soon as he could speak.

Ay, dear Charles, and you know why I did it. Here—do you remember it? And as she spoke she drew from her bosom a small silken purse, and took therefrom a sixpence.

The youth recognized it as an instant.

Oh, he cried as he pressed the noble girl to his bosom, what can I say? Mary—Mary—my own heart's true love—let my life in the years to come tell my gratitude. O, my all, my all is yours, and my last breath shall bear your name in gratitude to God.

And Charles Aubrey never forgot his promise. With his noble companion by his side he traveled up the hill, and in his path the flowers of life grew thick and fragrant.

Upon the wall of his sitting room hangs a picture. It is a splendid painting of the Prodigal Son's return. Upon the face of a heavy gilt frame, visitors notice a small blemish, but which upon closer examination, proves to be a small silver coin. Our readers need not be told why that bit of metal is thus carefully preserved.

Pseudonymous Cities.

A correspondent in "Life Illustrated," gives the following reasons for the fictitious names many of our cities bear:

"Baltimore is the 'Monument City,' from the great Battle Monument, and several others of note within its limits.

"Boston is the 'Classic City,' or Athens of America) from its acknowledged pre-eminence in the literary and fine pursuits.

"Chicago, (Ill.) is the 'Garden City,' from the luxuriant richness of the surrounding country.

"Cincinnati is the 'Queen City,' so christened from the fact that a greater number of metropolises of the West; but I believe Chicago now sets up rival claims to that distinction.

"Cleveland, Ohio, is the 'Forest City,' from the peculiarly rural aspect of the streets, squares and private grounds which makes it one of the most delightful cities in the United States.

"Columbus, Ohio, is the 'Fossil City,' from the beautiful fossil limestone which abounds in its locality, and of which much of the city is built.

"Council Bluffs, Iowa, on the Missouri river, is the 'Bluffs City,' from the celebrated Council Bluffs, nearly opposite, in Nebraska.

"Davenport, Iowa, is the 'Bridge City,' from the great Railroad Bridge which spans the Mississippi at that point.

"Hartford, (Ct.) is the 'Charter Oak City,' from the famous charter oak of colonial history.

"Indianapolis, Indiana, is the 'Railroad City,' from the fact that a greater number of railroads centre there than at any other point in the Union.

"Keokuk, Iowa, is the 'Gate City,' from its position as the first city in Iowa, ascending the Mississippi, and also at being at the foot of the so-called lower rapids, whence it has commerce by river with all that lower country, when the other cities have none.

"Louisville, (Ky.) is the 'Falls City,' from the falls of the Ohio at that point.

"Memphis, (Tenn.) is the 'Cotton City,' from the vast amount of cotton shipped from its levee—perhaps the heaviest of any inland port.

"Montpelier, (Vt.) is the 'Green Mountain City,' being the capital of the Green Mountain State.

"New Haven, (Ct.) is the 'Elm City,' I believe, from the profusion of Elm trees which adorn its streets.

"New Lisbon, (O.) is the 'Dwarf City,' so named in a poem located there by one of its sons. It is a small country town, finished and fenced in, but presents in a remarkable degree, all the appearance and characteristics of a well-ordered city.

These numbers still bear a similar proportion to the time the animal takes to grow to its full size. When the cartilaginous parts of the bone become ossified, the bone ceases to grow. This takes place in man about twenty years on an average in the camel at eight; in the horse at five; in the ox at four; in the lion at four; in the dog at two; in the cat at eighteen months; in the rabbit at twelve; in the guinea-pig at seven.

Five or six times these numbers give the term of life; five is pretty near the average; some animals greatly exceed it. But man, of all the animals, is the one that seldom comes up to his average. He ought to live a hundred years, according to this physiological law, for five times twenty are a hundred; but instead of that he scarcely reaches on an average four times his growing period; whilst the dog reaches six times the standard of measurement. The reason is obvious. Man is not only the most irregular and the most intemperate, but the most laborious and hard worker of all animals. He is also the most irritable of all animals; and there is reason to believe, though we cannot tell what an animal secretly feels, that more than any other animal, man cherishes wrath to keep it warm, and consumes himself with the fire of his own secret reflections.—Blackwood's Magazine.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, December 13th, 1856.

"BORN TO MASTER, OR NO SERVANT WE."

MUNICIPAL ELECTION IN BOSTON. The late election in Boston resulted in the complete success of the Citizen's Ticket. Mayor Rice was re-elected, together with a great party of the other officers supported by that party. Quite a small vote was thrown, owing no doubt, in a measure, to the feeling which generally prevailed, that the present incumbents would sweep the stakes.

CABINET MAKERS. By our exchanges we perceive that quite a host of political tinkers are at work framing a Cabinet for the incoming President. This we conceive is in bad taste. Mr. Buchanan should be left free in such matters, and not be embarrassed in his selection by the feelings or wishes of interested partisans.

GOVERNOR'S ELECTION. The following table exhibits the vote for Governor in the Old Bay State at the late election:

Whole number of ballots,	156,925
Henry J. Gardner of Boston,	92,467
Erasmus D. Beach of Springfield,	40,082
Geo. W. Gordon of Boston,	10,385
Luther V. Bell of Charlestown,	7,073
Joshua Quincy, Sen. of Boston,	5,625
Scattering	1,291

KANZAS. Peace continues to reign there, and under the firm and impartial administration of Gov. Geary, the best of feeling has been restored. In a letter recently published in the St. Louis Democrat, a Free-soil paper, from Col. Harvey, of Lawrence, in that Territory, signed by fifty others, all Free State men—they make bitter complaints against the Kansas Enfranchisement Act, and unhesitatingly pronounce it a swindle and a humbug. They warn those who have remittances of charity to make, to seek some other channel, or safer mode of conveyance, if they wish their donations to reach the objects of their sympathy. Numerous instances of fraud are enumerated.

FOREIGN. By the late arrival from Europe, it may be seen by the tone of the English press, that they are anything but pleased at the result of our late election. They berate us unmercifully for our ingratitude,—predict dire calamities that are soon to overtake us,—and console themselves with the pious hope that our race as a nation is nearly run. Grumble on, Mr. Bull! we pleased ourselves in this instance, perhaps next time we may try to please you.

CONGRESS. But little head way has yet been made in the business of the Session—and it is not expected there will be until after the Holidays. Members by that time generally get into good working order. The mooted question, of the right of Mr. Whitfield, the delegate from Kansas, to a seat in the House, has been settled in the affirmative, by a vote of 111 to 107.

STATE RIGHTS. A Southern Convention is in session at Savannah, (Geo.) consulting about measures to promote Southern prosperity.

SUSPENDED. The Dorchester Horse Railroad has suspended running, as the bridge to Dorchester is not yet finished. It is expected that it will be done in a fortnight, or perhaps ten days.

LITTLE DORRIT. We have received from T. B. Peterson, Dickens work of the above title. It is one of his best and is deeply interesting. In fact Peterson only publishes the best works and when any of our readers shall find a work issued from his publishing house they may buy safely and be sure that they get the full worth of their money.

ECCELESIASTICAL. The South Congregational Church and Society, in South Braintree, gave Rev. Dennis Powers, of South Abington, a unanimous invitation to become their pastor, and he has accepted the call.

PREVENTIVE OF THE SCARLET FEVER. A correspondent writes to the Boston Post that, one globe of Belladonna, taken every morning, by each and every member of a family, will certainly prevent the spread of the scarlet fever in every household that may adopt it, certainly as vaccination will prevent the small pox. A wet finger applied to a globe and placed upon the tongue of a child or adult is all that is necessary to prevent the spread of the disease. Ten cents will purchase a year's supply of Belladonna.

FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS. The Mammoth Pictorial Double Brother Jonathan is already in the field, and is filled, as usual, with large and spirited Pictures for the Christmas Holidays. Published by B. H. Day, 45 Beekman street, New York. Send twelve cents, (postage stamps or money) and you will get this elegant picture sheet free of postage. Nine are sent (post paid) for One Dollar; or Eleven, if not post paid.

NEW CENT PICES. Congress has passed a law authorizing the coinage of the new cent pieces, but has neglected to provide for their issue. The consequence is, that a "heap" of them are now at the mint in Philadelphia, awaiting the order of Congress to circulate. They are about the size of the half cent circulated fifteen or sixteen years ago, and are composed of copper, nickel and zinc.

LADY'S ALMANAC. This calendar for 1857 has been kindly sent us by Hon. Wm. S. Darnell, a member of the firm of Darnell & Moore, the publishers, who will please accept our thanks. It is a useful little annual, printed and embellished in the best style, and filled with valuable and entertaining matter. Every lady should possess a copy.

John P. Jewett & Co. of Boston, are also publishers of this Almanac, and it may be purchased at the Quincy Bookstore.

HANCOCK LIGHT GUARDS. The first of the Assemblies for the season, of the Hancock Light Guards, came off at their Armory last evening. The weather was balmy and invigorating—the assemblage large and respectable—the Hall was tastefully and appropriately decorated, and the music excellent and inspiring. Every thing passed off in perfect harmony, and apparently to the satisfaction of all present. It was a happy commencement, and we trust it is the presage of a successful future.

For the Patriot.
Christmas!

Merry Christmas! with its train of pleasing associations, has again returned to claim our devotions. What event in the Christian calendar should receive so large a share of our veneration as the birth-day of Him, who laid the foundation of our faith,—brought life and immortality to light, and revealed to a benighted world, the glorious prospect of the immortal inheritance which awaits them beyond the portals of the tomb. The Wise Men of the East, hailed the advent, as the precursor of a new era, with thanksgiving and praise.—the groaning millions with rapture, at the prospect of deliverance from physical evils and spiritual bondage. It was a subject of rejoicing to all classes, except the Church and its parasites. They saw in the spiritual philosophy of the new Messiah, an end to their wicked and inglorious reign. In the meek and lowly Nazarene, who had taken upon the cross of the people, they had much to fear. Their safety required his sacrifice, and he was led forth to the slaughter a victim of clerical vengeance. They crucified the body, but the eternal truths which he promulgated, survived the grave. Rome, under the reign of her most successful sovereigns, caught the inspiration, and as long as she remained true to the faith, sustained her independence.

Primitive Christianity is silently accomplishing its mission—in bringing together into one fold all the nations of the earth—and to the worship of the true God—who is no respecter of persons, but in whose sight all men are equal. What object then, so worthy of a Christian people, than consecrating this day to the service of the Great Architect of their faith, in deeds of mercy, acts of charity, and in the enjoyment of rational pleasures. In a word, to see that we discharge our duties to our fellow-man, in such a manner, that we shall be accredited worthy followers of Him, who planted on the hills of Palestine, the standard of civil and religious freedom.

NO. 29, SS.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners held at Dedham, in and for said county, on the twentieth day of November, A. D. 1856, by an adjournment of the September meeting, just preceding.

Upon the petition of Charles Littlefield and others representing that the highway in East Stoughton, near the dwelling house of Simon Leach, and on the line of said Leach and Charles Littlefield, is crooked and inconvenient, and that the public good requires that the same be straightened and requesting the Commissioners to view said road and widen, straighten, new locate, or make such alterations therein as they may deem proper, they do hereby order and direct the said Commissioners to view said road and to discontinue such parts of the present road as are not required for the public use, (notice having been first given to all persons and corporations interested,) the County Commissioners met at the house of Charles Littlefield in East Stoughton, on the tenth day of September last, at 9 o'clock, A.M., the time and place before designated, and thence proceeded to view the way and premises, and the petitioners appeared, and the town of Stoughton was then and there represented by its officers and agents, having heard all parties interested the Commissioners adjudge that common convenience and necessity, require that said highway be widened and re-located, and that alterations be made therein, and that the prayer of said petition be granted.

Nathaniel F. Safford, County

James C. Duane, } Commissioners.

B. S. Farrington, }

On the adjudication aforesaid, Ordered that the County Commissioners meet at the dwelling house of Charles Littlefield, in W. Stoughton, on the thirtieth day of March next at 10 o'clock, A.M., and thence proceed to view and widen and re-locate and alter said way, and take such action in relation to said adjudication as by law they may be authorized to do.

And that an attested copy of said petition with this order thereon be served upon the Clerk of the Town of Stoughton, thirty days at least before the time appointed for said meeting, and after that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot a newspaper printed in Quincy, in said County, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before said day of meeting, and that all persons and corporations interested for or against said adjudication may then and are said to be about 11,000 acres, of which about 1,500 acres are cleared. He has a large tract of land in Bedford County, where he raises annually about 40,000 weight of tobacco, and grain sufficient to maintain the plantation.

He keeps no stock of horses and cattle here, but uses mules for his wagons. The number of his negroes is about two hundred. His flock of sheep are valuable; they consist of the Cape, or large tail, Shetland and Merino breeds. The manufactures at present carried on by him, are, at Bedford, of smith's work; and at Monticello, a millinery; the latter conducted by boys, and a manufactory of cotton and woollens. Mr. Jefferson proposes making considerable improvements, useful and ornamental, both here and in his pleasure grounds.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, December 20th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

SINGING. There is no more rational and elevating entertainment, or recreation, in which mortals can engage, than in singing. All who listened to the very beautiful and eloquent description, of the introduction into this world, and the uses thereof afterwards, of the faculty of language as expressed in poetry and song, given to the audience of the Quincy Lyceum, by our talented townsman, Henry Walker, Esq. in his late lecture on Moore and his poetry, will give their hearty assent to our assertion. But in singing, as in speaking, there are two requisites for the greatest amount of pleasure, viz: performers and listeners; and we wish at this time, as one of the latter, to make our acknowledgments to the former, for the opportunity of an hour's delightful enjoyment given us, in company with others, a few evenings since, by a new Quartette of Singers, of our town, whose performances would do credit to many artists of vastly greater pretensions. As we understand our citizens are soon to be favored with a public entertainment from them, we shall reserve more particular reference until some other opportunity, merely suggesting, that in Mr. Wentworth, as Bass, and Mr. Sumner, as Tenor, we have voices and cultivation far above mediocrity, in fact, eminently superior, which, when combined with the peculiarly sweet, melodious voice of Miss McGrath, and the full, agreeable Alto, of Mrs. Sheldon forms a "Harmony of sweet sounds," at once captivating and inspiring; while their selection of songs, glee, and other pieces, shows a high-toned taste, and a love of the beautiful in music and poetry, that will place them in the first rank of musical performers.

We are pleased to be informed that the entertainment referred to, will take place on Monday Evening next, at Johnson's Hall, and we earnestly call upon all our readers to attend upon that occasion, and thus receive for themselves a pure pleasure, and confer encouragement upon unquestionable merit.

SEVEN DEGREES BELOW ZERO. This will do pretty well for winter, even if it is in advance of Christmas. The Thermometer, we were told, indicated that mark, on Thursday morning last. Our climate is very unstable, affording every variety under the canopy of heaven. One day we have warm and balmy breezes from the South, with the Thermometer at sixty;—the next, cold and frozen ones from the North, from five to ten below zero. People should guard against such changes, as they would preserve their health. We know it is wrong to laugh at misery, still, at times, we cannot help being amused at the new life which Jack Frost imparts to our pedestrians; muffled up to the ears, with nose of a vermillion hue, the poor victims rush through the streets, snapping and blowing their fingers, seeking some shelter to escape the stings of their tormentor. He is a relentless old tyrant, which should be borne in mind by the charitable.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS. Our readers will please accept from us the congratulations of the season. May it in truth prove to you all a "Merry Christmas,"—in health, happiness and every social and domestic comfort.

We looked in at our friend Gill's, a few days since, and were much pleased with the rich and numerous presents for the Holidays which were profusely scattered over his counter. Surely, we thought, the presiding genius of the occasion, Santa Claus, must have been his rounds, and that our young friends need have no fear, but that their "Patron Saint," will, on Christmas Eve, make his accustomed visit. Hang up your stockings.

MURDER BY A CONVICT. On Monday last, at the State prison in Charlestown, Galen C. Walker, the Deputy Warden, was murdered by a convict named James Magee. The fatal assault was committed with a shoe knife, as the prisoners were passing from the chapel after the religious services in the morning.

TO CORRESPONDENTS. We have many favors on hand, which have been unavoidably crowded out.

Col. Minott Thayer. In the list of deaths will be found that of this distinguished gentleman. He was at one time a merchant in Washington Street, Boston, many years a Representative to General Court from Braintree, and served with honor his fellow-townsmen in different municipal offices of trust during his long life. His acquaintance was quite extensive, and none knew him but to prize his society.

DORCHESTER HORSE RAILROAD. The new Federal street bridge and draw, in Boston, being entirely completed, the cars of the Dorchester Avenue Railroad are now enabled to make regular trips from the corner of Broad and State streets, Boston, to Glover's Corner, Dorchester. Only two cars now in use, and trips are made each way, once every hour. The usual running time is about half an hour.

By reference to another column, it will be seen that Mr. Gill advertises the usual variety, in his line, of presents for the Holidays. Give him a call. There is no surer way of strengthening our friendship, or drawing still closer the bonds of filial affection, than by some such memento of our esteem and regard.

CONGRESS. Business is gradually progressing in both branches of Congress. Gen. Winfield has been admitted to a seat as delegate from Kansas.

The House of Representatives, by a vote of 183 to 8, has resolved that it is inexpedient, unwise, and contrary to the settled policy of the United States, to repeal the laws prohibiting the African slave trade.

STILL THEY COME. A new territory, named Arizona, formed from the Gadsden purchase, sends its first delegate, armed with credentials in due form, to this session of Congress, to secure an organization of the territory. He reports the population of Arizona at from ten to fifteen thousand persons, and that the territory will make a State about as large as Pennsylvania.

MORE TERRITORY. It is stated that there are now twenty Indian treaties before the Senate, involving the cession of 122,000,000 acres of land for a consideration of about $11,000,000. The Indians within our limits are estimated at about 300,000 souls.

NORFOLK COUNTY SENATORS. The Dedham Gazette gives the vote for Senators in Norfolk county: Republican Ticket—Churchill 8380, Turner 8375, Merrick 8367.

Union Ticket—James (Dem.) 5588, Holbrook (Amer.) 5616, Hendee (Whig) 5878.

THE VOTE FOR PRESIDENT. Further returns make the vote for President fall up as follows:—Buchanan 1,796,277, Fremont, 1,323,185; Fillmore 892,620. The returns to come in will not materially vary the result.—Mr. Buchanan is over four hundred thousand ahead of Fremont, and Mr. Fremont has half a million more votes than Mr. Fillmore.

MEMBER OF CONGRESS. The following is the full vote for candidates for Congress in District No. 3:

Wm. S. Darnell of Dedham,	10433
A. W. Austin of West Roxbury	5077
A. B. Ely of Newton,	1133

OFFICIAL VOTE FOR COUNCILLORS. We give the following:—

DISTRICT 2.	20773
Laben M. Wheaton of Norton, chosen,	13717
Bradford L. Wales of Randolph,	3317
Bradford Wales,	633
N. W. Collins of Dorchester	1,099
Jonathan P. Robinson of Roxbury,	705
Abner Holbrook of Weymouth	334
Scattering,	368

THE HANCOCK LIGHT GUARDS. It will be perceived intend welcoming the approaching Holidays in an appropriate manner. On Christmas Eve, a ball will be given by them at their Armory. Every thing looks promising for a glorious time.

GRANITE SALOON. The Proprietor of the Granite Saloon will pardon our negligence in not paying our respects to him before. Mr. French is one of the best caterers, in his line, that is to be found within miles around. The public, no doubt, ere this, are aware of this fact, as they have had many opportunities to test the truth of our assertion. His Chowders, especially his "Clam Chowders," have a world-renowned reputation, and we are pleased to announce that he is prepared to serve parties or private families, at the shortest notice, with this delectable preparation. On Saturday afternoons and evenings, it will be served up for the special accommodation of his friends, at his Saloon, corner of Hancock and Granite streets.

Deaths.

In Braintree, on the 14th inst., Col. Minott Thayer, aged 85 years.

In Roxbury, of consumption, on the 4th inst., Mrs. Abba P. wife of William W. Ryerson, and daughter of the late Emanuel Swasey, aged 24 years.

Tribute of Friendship

To the memory of Mrs. E. L. Partridge, sister of Mrs. Harrison Knish of this town, who died suddenly in St. Louis, (Mis.) on the 16th ult.

BY FRANCES D. GAGE.

Mourn not for her, in the emblems of sadness,
Weep not for her, with hearts shrouded in gloom,
Fitter by far is the anthem of gladness,
Lifting the veil from the shroud and the tomb.

Why should we weep for her, was she not ready,
Oil in her lamp, and her bridal robes on—
Waiting in faith, with a hope firm and steady,
The good shepherd's call, and the plaudit "well done."

Think of her, speak of her, not as departed,
Short is the distance that parts us to day—
Round us, about us, the brave and true hearted,
Linger the deeds that have brightened her way.

Up and acting the lessons she taught us—
Up and be doing what she would have done,
Afflictions have oft to a higher life brought us,
And made us in peace say "Thy will be done."

Pause not to mourn for her; up and be doing,
Follow the paths that her feet trod before,
Hourly and daily her life work renewing:
Speak peace to the troubled, give bread to the poor.

Thus let us honor her—walking in duty,
Thus shall her life of our lives form a part,
Her memory be shrouded in a temple of beauty,
And treadless with wreaths from the gems of the heart.

Call her not dead, the worn body but sleepeth,
Calm in its rest, 'neath the sun guided soul,
The spirit triumphant, its tone vigh keepeth,
Unfettered, in bliss, at the right hand of God.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, December 27th, 1856.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

NEW YEAR. A cordial wish is extended to our friends and patrons on the annual return of that day, which divides the "Old Year from the New." May peace, plenty and happiness attend you through the journey of life, and may we draw still closer the ties of friendship, as we leave the old year behind us, and enter the new with hearts warm with gratitude to that kind Providence, whose arm has so far sustained us, and cast our lot in this most favored land.

CHRISTMAS. We have seldom seen a more lively one. One in which our citizens generally appeared to take so large an interest. The weather was fine, the sleighing good, and the number of pedestrians abroad intent upon pleasure, with the merry jingling of sleigh bells, gave quite an animated appearance to our streets. From certain indications, also, we were assured that our young friends were kindly remembered—that Santa Claus had been more than usually profuse in his munificence. The day was closed with a ball by the Hancock Light Guards, at their Armory; an entertainment by Norton's Ethiopian Serenaders at Johnson's Hall, and other amusements.

SANTA CLAUS' HOME. No. 78 Washington street, Boston, at the well known Old Stand, of JAMES FRENCH & CO., may be found a large and elegant assortment of the rich, rare and curious, in fancy articles, suitable for Christmas and New Year's presents, fine stationery, games, &c., at the lowest cash prices, together with a large and elegant assortment of annuals, Bibles, gilt edged Prayer Books, in turkey, morocco, and other styles of binding and decorations. Among the many valuable books offered for sale may be found the following, viz:

Herbert's Poems, elegant edition, tinted paper, full gilt; a splendid set of Waverley novels full calf, steel plates; Miss Cooper's Country Life, illustrated; the Book of Beauty, ten steel plates; American Landscapes, sixteen steel plates; Richard's Star of the West, ten steel plates; an elegant edition of Boston Common.

A variety of albums and annals in paper and rich morocco bindings.

THE GREATEST GAME OF THE SEASON. Just published by French & Co., Boston, price fifty cents. This game is designed for all, both old and young, and is admitted by every one which has seen it, to be every way superior to any game ever published in Boston. It is an original Panorama of the Life and thrilling incidents of an African family, from the coast of Guinea to the capital, from the capital to a New England home fireside: full of graphic incidents, masterly and truly drawn. It is one of the prettiest games ever sold.

BACKWARD STEP. The Delavan House, at Albany, (N. Y.) has ceased to be conducted on the temperance principle, the lessee, acting on legal advice, has declared that he will hereafter furnish wine and liquors to his guests, in defiance of the prohibition in his lease. Mr. Delavan has written him a letter protesting against such a breach of confidence, and asserting him that the litigation which will necessarily follow, which ever way it results, will be as painful as it will be certain.

QUINCY QUARTETTE CLUB. The Concert by this Company, at Johnson's Hall, on Monday evening last, came off to the apparent satisfaction of all present. It was a rich musical entertainment, happily conceived and most admirably executed. There were many points of beauty, in several of the pieces brought forward which struck us quite favorably, but space at this time, will not allow a more extended notice.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS. Look in at Dr. Menden's; a rich and large assortment may be found upon his counter, peculiarly adapted for the Holidays.

For the Patriot
To the Public.

MR. EDITOR:—There is a considerable just condemnation expressed by a number of our citizens, upon the course pursued by the administrator of a certain estate, towards one who should receive, by all the ties of relation and common humanity, a far different treatment. Not only have all the common amenities of life been violated, but a system of unjust wrong perpetrated, which should cause the blush of shame to tingle the cheek of any man, not dead to all the feelings of decent respect. If any of our partialist friends wish for a living illustration to prove the doctrine of total depravity, a fine opportunity is now offered. If you will give me a small space in your columns, the facts in this case shall soon be made public.

A RARE CHANCE. By reference to another column it will be seen that Messrs Packard & Co. are about offering bargains in the Dry Goods line, well worthy the attention of our citizens. They have also added new attractions to their business, in securing the services of Santa Claus for a season. He has a department of his own, which is well filled with the choicest of his gifts. An early visit is indispensable, as his Dutch Highness thinks of leaving town soon after the Holidays. Give them a call.

For the Patriot.

Fremont in California.—Black Insurrection in Tennessee. Strolling Mendicant Lecturers.

The late news from California, has taken a certain class of politicians, as Jack would say, "all aback." This was the theatre, were told, of the intrepid "Pathfinders" greatest achievements,—through his influence, the young and virgin state had been saved from the shackles of slavery; would she prove ungrateful? It was impossible. Here too, it was exultingly declared, where to be found Mr. Fremont's warmest friends, friends that would stand by him in the hour of need. What is the result? out of the one hundred and ten thousand votes cast at the late election, they put him down, for only about nineteen thousand! — a mere corporal's guard. Where he is known best, he appears to fare the worst.

From recent accounts from Tennessee, it appears that one of the most wicked and fiendish plots to massacre indiscriminately the white inhabitants of that place, has, through a kind and over-ruling Providence, been timely brought to light. The blacks were organized, and acting under the instigation of rabid Abolitionists of the North. What part the "Three thousand pious clergymen of New England," have taken in this fearful drama, is not stated. We must guess, however. Still, they cannot be held entirely blameless. The course which they have pursued for a number of years past, in associating themselves with some of the worst spirits of the age—reckless and ventures—unprincipled politicians, and the infidel scum of Europe, to revolutionize the country, and overthrow the government, has placed them in a position no ways enviable and from which they will hereafter be looked upon with suspicion. If this hellish scheme had succeeded, it would have been impossible for human foresight to have marked the extent of its ravages—to have told whether the whole South would have been deluged in blood or not. As it is, we view it as a belting sequel to the closing reign of black Republicanism.

Since writing the above, farther intelligence has been received from Virginia and South Carolina, showing that a systematic organization was being effected throughout the entire South, and that Christmas was to have been the day for a general revolt. In Tennessee, the blacks were made to believe that on the election of Fremont, an armed force would be despatched to the frontiers of the State, to render them every aid and protection. Many of the poor wretches have been implicated in the affair and fell victims to their credulity.

Kansas has furnished the nucleus to a certain class of politicians, to bleed the unsuspecting public in a variety of ways. First, we had the Kansas Emigrant Aid Society, which has turned out, as it is admitted on all hands, to be a perfect humbug and swindle. Now, we have strolling mendicant lecturers, both black and white, who are covering the land like the frogs in Egypt; They come to us, with certificates in their pockets, of their general good character, and strong recommendations to our charity. The burden of their discourse, is the same old song,—Kansas, bleeding, suffering Kansas—the iron rule of the government, to crush out every vestige of liberty in that Territory—the outrages of the South—her arrogant bearing—ruffianism, and unprovoked encroachments upon the rights of the North. This is the kind of repast, which is usually served up at these intellectual banquets, for party purposes, and to pander to a sickly and morbid appetite; which lives by excitement, and feeds upon detraction, falsehood and calumny. By whose influence these exhibitions are paraded before the public, does not concern us; but we can assure them, that they are behind the times; that the people are becoming disgusted with such fulsome trash, and that the object they have in view, is far from being promoted by such means.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 17th inst., Mrs. Louisa P., wife of John Hunt, aged 70 years.

On the 24th, Lawrence Isabella, daughter of Mr. Luther M. and Mrs. Nancy Bradbury, aged 4 years and 2 months.

On the 24th, Abby, daughter of Mr. Jacob and Mrs. Elizabeth Flint, aged 3 years and 9 months.

On the 24th inst., Mrs. Almira W. Murdock, aged 46 years and 7 months.

"She sleepeth now, the loved one;
The Saviour asks no more,—
His work of Christian love is done,
Her weary watch is o'er."

Long was the lonely vigil,
The dawn light before;
The morning star has risen—
Her weary watch is o'er."

Another seraph singeth:
My soul should God adore;
My Saviour! O, my Saviour!
My weary watch is o'er."

'Tis but the dust that sleepeth;
Weep for the dust no more—
Mourn not the loved one hopeeth
Her weary watch is o'er."

On the 17th ult., Emma Louisa only child of Mr. Peter W. and Mrs. Harriet C. Newcomb, aged 6 years, 1 month and 28 days.

Dear parents! it is well to weep,
Our Saviour wept at sorrow's call;
But cheering hope, not anguish deep,
Inspired their hearts, who witnessed all.

With heart felt sympathy He speaks,
Compassion's love He shows, full plain,
As at the grave, the body seeks,
He calls aloud, it lives again.

Have hope! through clouds of sorrow now
And anguish deep, and grief sore pain;
Put not the shadows from thy brow
Wash not to call her back again.

Though could in death her form be laid,
In casket fair, "a lovely sight,"
Have faith! in what our Saviour said,
Have faith! she lives, an angel bright.

This lesson learn in sorrow's hour,
In heaven, first to put your trust,
Since earthly hopes, fade like the flower,
And all things mortal turn to dust.

This is the greatest triumph ever obtained in MEDICAL ELECTRICITY, and offers new facilities for purifying the blood from all humors, and removing
